KING AND QUEEN IN IRELAND

DUBLIN, July 8.—The Irish laid aside politics and creed to-day to welcome King George and Queen Mary on their first official visit to Ireland since their accession to the throne.

At dawn to-day the fleet of thirty British warships, the largest ever assembled in Irish waters, fired the royal salute for the royal party on board the imperial yacht Victoria and Albert, which rode at anchor in Kingston harbor where she had arrived last night.

Even as day broke crowds had begun to assemble along all the available space about the breakwater and harbor front. Although they could not see either the King or Queen upon the yacht in the offing, they cheered lustily. "Home Rule" at that moment was apparently forgotten.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland officially greeted the royal couple after they landed from the Victoria and Albert and they were driven in state to Dublin Castle through streets that were gaily decorated.

Brilliant Reception.

After he arrived at the Castle an address was presented to the King by the Council of Kingstown, to which he replied. Bouquets were presented to Queen Mary and to Princess Mary. A martial air was given to the scene about the castle by a squadron of lancers, who were drawn up in the court yard after having acted as guard of honor on the procession from Kingstown.

A number of brilliant state functions are to take place in the royal residence during the next few days, including dinners, a levee, a court reception and a chapter of the order of St. Patrick. The old building, dating from early in the thirteenth century, is not very imposing in appearance, but it is commodious and well suited for court ceremonies.

In the presence chamber, where the court receptions will be held, stands the King's throne of gilt carved work under a canopy of rich crimson velvet, beautifully ornamented with gold lace. In the ballroom, known as St. Patrick's Hall, the chapters of the order of St. Patrick's always are held.

King to Review Troops.

Sunday their majesties will attend service at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Monday the King will inspect the royal English constabulary in Phoenix Park, where he will also hold a review of troops and present some of the regiments with new colors.

Among a large party of guests at the vice regal lodge are the Earl and Countess of Granard, the Earl and Countess of Danodn, the Earl and Countess of Carrick, the Countess of Mayo, Lord and Lady Castletown, the Earl and Countess of Rosse, Lord and Lady Castlemaine and

Members of the Irish Sinn Fein Society went to Bodenstown to-day in great numbers to attend the commemoration of the memory of Wolf Tone, the Irish patriot, thus turning their backs upon King George, figuratively speaking.

James W. Sullivan, of New York, was the chief speaker at Bodenstown, where Tone lies buried. The members there attended a meeting of protest against a public reception to the King.

ETHEL BARRYMORE COLT WAS PROUD OF HER MOTHERHOOD

Ethel Barrymore Colt has asked for a divorce with $250,000 alimony and the custody of her child. Actresses are supposed to be averse to the idea of motherhood, but when Mrs. Barrymore Colt played in Boston last in "Alice Sit by the Fire," she was asked:

"Do you find that motherhood has changed your interpretation of Alice?"

"No," she answered, "for we are born with or without the maternal instinct. It has always been strong in me. I play Alice more lightly than I did before. I took it with such deadly seriousness before my baby came, and now I find myself playing the role with little touches of gladsome humor—born of the joy of motherhood."

With a little bit of luck, the Rustlers would now have to their credit two straight victories over Clark Griffith's Reds. The luck was lacking on Thursday, so we will have to be content with an even break to date and hope that another win will be added to the rather skinny list to-day.

Bill Sweeney, Kaiser and Perdue were the real heroes of yesterday's encounter, which the Rustlers copped by a score of five to four. Mr. Perdue had a bad start and the visitors possessed three tallies at the end of the first inning. Then Herbert began to pitch, and only one more run was scored off him. At that, he wasn't at his best. His fast ball was not as fast as it can be, and his control was loose. But he had plenty of nerve, and he got away with it.

As for Mr. Sweeney, he stepped to the plate four times, cracked out four hits, scored thrice and took care of eight fielding chances without a slip. Mr. Kaiser concentrated most of his energy into one noble deed. He swatted a homer over the left field wall in the third, with a runner on, and gave the bugs hope where none had existed before.

It's so strange to see a Boston pitcher go all the way through a game that the

MRS. COLT SEEKING DIVORCE

Ethel Barrymore, the brilliant actress, who has a particularly large circle of friends in Boston, has taken steps to get a divorce from her husband, Russell Griswold Colt.

The papers asking for the divorce will be filed in New York on Monday. Mrs. Colt, it is said, will name a prominent New York society woman in her action.

The matrimonial fiasco of Mrs. Colt is of especial interest to Boston because the young couple was married here, and the high-rolling husband comes from Rhode Island. The wedding was in March, two years ago.

Mrs. Colt is now at Hollywood, a suburb of Los Angeles. She is playing at the Mason Opera House in Los Angeles. Colt's whereabouts are not known. He has been seen on Broadway, New York, within the past few weeks, but he could not be found today at his house on East Thirty-fourth street, that city, nor could anything be learned as to where he is at his office, No. 60 Broadway, where he is with a firm of brokers.

Colt Drops from Sight.

A man's voice responded when Mr. Colt's home at Taylor's Point, Mamaroneck, was called on the telephone. When asked whether Mr. Colt was at home the voice asked what information was wanted. It was explained that Mr. Colt himself was wanted at the telephone.

"What do you want to speak to him about?" the man at Mr. Colt's house repeated sharply.

He was told of the report that some one was on the way to New York from Los Angeles to serve papers of divorce upon Mr. Colt.

"That's private business," snapped the voice.

His attention was called to the fact that the report was such that evidently it had become a public matter in the West.

"Well, Mr. Colt isn't living here now," said the voice.

"Is Mrs. Colt at Taylor's Point?"

"No, they're not living here now," came the answer. "I don't know where either of them is now."

During the last fortnight or more Mr. Colt has been seen many times wandering to a table at a New York Broadway restaurant, sometimes alone, but usually accompanied by one or two men friends. His house in East Thirty-fourth street, New York, was closed, and caretakers of

FIRE ON MALLORY LINE STEAMSHIP

NEW YORK, July 8.—Fire broke out early to-day on the Mallory line steamship Concho, while she was lying at her pier in East River, and threatened serious consequences for a time, as a large quantity of powder and cartridges was contained in her cargo. The fire was in the forehold and burned stubbornly, despite the four engines and two fireboats which fought it. After four hours the firemen gained control.

MERCURY AGAIN GOES CLIMBING

Greater Boston's temperature began to rise early to-day, carrying out the forecast of a return of hot weather.

At midnight the mercury stood at sixty-nine degrees, which was six degrees cooler than midnight the night before. At 7 a. m. to-day it was seventy-two degrees, just even with yesterday's 7 a. m. mark. But in the next hour the mercury climbed three degrees, whereas it fell two degrees in the same hour yesterday.

The forecast for to-day was:

"Saturday fair; Sunday fair, with slowly rising temperature; moderate easterly to southerly winds."

The temporary relief from the hot wave has lessened the frightful death rate for Boston and New England. It has given debilitated humanity a chance to recuperate. It was considered fortunate, also, that the Saturday half-holiday and the Sunday following gave people a chance to abstain from work and thus to bear up against a rising temperature with greater ease.

There were seven deaths and nine prostrations from heat in Greater Boston in the past twenty-four hours.

GERMAN CRUISER IN MOROCCAN PORT

TANGIER, Morocco, July 8.—Dispatches from Agadir received here to-day reported that the German cruiser Berlin had relieved the gunboat Panther at that port. This intelligence indicates that Germany is not prepared to retract her aggressive attitude in Moroccan affairs despite the turmoil which intervention has caused in Europe. The dispatches did not state whether marines had been landed.

$100,000 FIRE IN PORTSMOUTH

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 8.—A fire that followed a gasoline explosion in the machine shops of Chadwick & Trefethen to-day swept through the three-story structure, spread to two adjoining business places and five wooden dwellings, doing damage that was estimated at $100,000.

The firemen exerted all their strength and skill to check the flames, fearing that they might extend to a large gasometer that held the gas supply of the city and which stood not far from the spot where the fire started.

Workmen in the Chadwick & Trefethen building had narrow escapes with their lives, the flames darting through the place with a roar after the gasoline explosion. The whole neighborhood contained structures of inflammable material and the whole fighting force of the fire department was called out.

Next to the Chadwick & Trefethen building stood the plumbing and steam-fitting shop of James W. Barrett, and the fire soon caught this structure. This building was two stories in height.

The automobile sales and repair establishment of Charles E. Woods, a new structure, three stories high, was soon in flames. By quick work many of the machines were removed.

In the rear of the business structures were several wooden dwellings. These caught fire, the tenants not having time to remove their household effects.

It was reported that dynamite was stored in one of the buildings that caught fire, and all the time the firemen were at work they were in danger of an explosion that might have meant death.

CRAFT RAMMED BY SWORDFISH

With her crew at the pumps the Provincetown auxiliary fishing sloop Vesta arrived at T wharf after an exciting experience with swordfish. A huge swordfish had torn off the stuffing box of the propeller causing the craft to leak badly. For two days the crew was at the pumps before the sloop could be worked into port.

Captain James O'Neil and Fred Williams, a member of the crew, had battles with swordfish while in dories, and came near losing their lives. To cap the climax of hardships the mainsail jibed while the sloop was making port, splitting the sail and carrying away the traveler.

Last Wednesday Capt. O'Neil harpooned a 300-pounder and started Williams off in a dory to play out the monster. When half a mile from the sloop the swordfish turned and rammed the dory with its four-foot sword. The sword cut through the boat, barely missing Williams.

A short time afterwards Capt. Williams went after another swordfish which he had harpooned, and in the effort to lance it the fish turned and rammed his dory. The big sword just grazed the captain's ribs. Nevertheless, the trip netted $1,150.

FIRE IN HEMENWAY TERRACE

Four women were rescued by firemen and citizens, others fled in scanty clothing down fire escapes and several suffered severe nervous shock and slight burns in a three-alarm fire which did $25,000 damage to the fashionable Hemenway terrace apartments at Nos. 143-147 Hemenway street, Back Bay, to-day.

Miss Louise Hardy was rescued from her suite on the second floor.

Miss Lillian Sennett, on the third floor, climbed out on the fire escape on the first sign of smoke, descended to the bottom of the escape in the back and jumped to the ground.

A woman on the second floor fled via the fire escape in her night clothing. She had been sleeping late and had just arisen when the fire came.

Robert Rossan, an awning hanger, was working on a building across the street. At the first alarm of fire he rushed over, assisted two women down a fire escape from the second floor and then helped a woman who was dragging her trunk out a first floor doorway.

Fire Gains Rapidly.

Mrs. Joseph Mattisonvich, wife of the janitor, was in the basement with her baby when the fire started. She rushed upstairs and outdoors in terror, with the baby in her arms. Firemen found her running up and down Hemenway street, panic-stricken, with the baby's head covered with a broad burdock leaf. She had plucked this leaf to shelter the baby from the sun.

The entire section around Hemenway and Gainsboro streets and Westland avenue nearby was thrown into a turmoil.

The fire gained good headway before it was discovered. It seemed as though the entire structure was doomed. Screams of terrified occupants, the sight of women clambering in light attire down the fire escapes and the clouds of smoke which poured from the hallways made the fire seem like a holocaust at first.

Near Music Conservatory

Hemenway Terrace is a four-story, brick and stone apartment house, situated on the Charles River side of Hemenway street nearly opposite the head of Gainsboro street. The terrace is next to the dormitory of the New England Conservatory of Music on the north side and to the Bryant Apartments on the south. It was feared at one time that both these costly structures would be burned.

The terrace numbers 100 suites of two, three and four rooms. It is built around a horseshoe court, with large wings on either end of the horseshoe. The hallways are long and narrow. When the halls filled with smoke, as they did immediately, the question of getting out was greatly complicated.

The terrace and the Bryant adjoining are owned by Philip Bloomfield of Chelsea. Mr. Bloomfield is abroad at present. Mrs. Bloomfield is in charge of the structures.

There are many feminine tenants in the terrace, whose suites are well adapted for light housekeeping for women living alone or two or three in a suite.

During the musical season many students of music live there, the terrace being handy to the opera house and conservatory. It has been said of the terrace that there is a piano in every suite.

The fire became known shortly after 9 o'clock. It was 10:30 before it was out.

L MUST ACCEPT SUBWAY BILL

Subways for Boston as soon as possible without waiting for the settlement of the West End-Elevated lease or consolidation, are to be demanded of the Senate when it meets again on Monday. Governor Foss and the advocates of better transit facilities are determined that the recalcitrant West End stockholders shall not be permitted to hold up the new subway legislation because of their desire for dividends larger than 7 per cent.

The directors of the Elevated will have it directly put up to them to say whether they will give Boston increased transportation facilities or insist on the West End merger provision. Insistence on the West End consolidation matter will be taken at the State House to mean that the Elevated prefers to have the subway and tunnel legislation go over to the next General Court in the hope of a more kindly reception to a fifty year lease proposition.

It was said at the State House that Senator Tinkham would be asked to agree to an amendment to the subway bill making it unnecessary for any action on the part of the West End regarding the merger before the Elevated bill is acted upon.

The subway bill provides for the construction of the Boylston street subway in place of the subway already authorized beneath the Charles River embankment. It also provides for a subway from the Park street subway through South Boston and to Andrew square in Dorchester. Thirdly, it provides for the building of the West End loop of the East Boston tunnel.

Representative Brophy of East Boston presented a new element in the subway matter by taking to the State House an amendment which provides for the immediate settlement of the one cent toll, which under the present law is used to defray the expenses of the tunnel. He will offer it as an amendment to the subway bill when it comes to the House.

MILK SHORTAGE INVESTIGATED

The milk shortage in this city following the hot wave is being thoroughly investigated to-day by the Rev. Albert E. George of Boston, who was specially assigned to this task by Acting Mayor Walter L. Collins. Mr. George is acting in conjunction with the Boston Board of Health, and a report on the situation will be submitted to the acting mayor as quickly as possible.

Dr. Mullowney, secretary of the Board of Health, has been in conference with Mr. George, and a plan for a quick investigation has been mapped out. Few men in the city are so well qualified for this work as the Rev. Mr. George, who has had a large experience in settlement work both in this city and New York, where his investigations have been of great value.

Preliminary investigation shows that the milk shortage caused great suffering and possibly deaths of poor children in the North and West Ends. These conditions are being gone over by the Rev. Mr. George in his efforts to submit an accurate account of conditions to Acting Mayor Collins at once.

Unless the alarming shortage in the milk supply in the congested districts of the West and North Ends is relieved quickly an unparalleled mortality among infants in those sections is certain.

A careful and thorough canvass of the two sections mentioned by representatives of the AMERICAN resulted in the discovery that throughout the most congested portions of the city there is scarcely a grocer or small milk dealer whose accustomed supply of milk had not been either entirely cut off or materially reduced. Those few who were fortunate enough to receive as much as half the usual supply were early besieged by an anxious throng of mothers and children, who continued to pour in long after the meager supply had been exhausted.

These conditions, however, do not obtain at the milk stations maintained by philanthropy.

The Milk and Baby Hygiene Association has nine milk distributing stations in the most congested portion of the city. Milk is supplied to them by D. Whiting & Sons. The milk, which is duly prepared and modified, is supplied to the poor only upon presentation of a blank properly endorsed by a physician. The officers of the association comprise most of the leading children's specialists in the city. At none of these stations were the nurses in charge aware of any milk famine in the districts which they supplied.

Need Doctor's Certificate.

"We have a contract with Whiting & Sons," was the invariable answer, "and we have obtained our regular supply of milk. We know of no milk famine."

"Can any poor woman who needs milk for her baby come and get some here if she has the money to pay for it?" was asked.

"Only if she has a physician's certificate. She probably couldn't get it the same day anyhow, as we have our regular people to supply, and it would take us till the next day to increase our order."

Several prominent physicians were asked about the milk situation. Dr. Henry I. Bowditch of Beacon street, of the staff of the Infants' Hospital and the Floating Hospital, said he had heard of no shortage of milk among the poor. Dr. Charles H. Dunn of Marlboro street, on the staff of the Children's and Infants' Hospital, also denied any scarcity in the supply.

The North and West Ends told a different tale. Out of fifty milk dealers in the most populous streets, only one had received his usual milk supply. He was J. A. Barnes of No. 157 Salem street. He receives eight cans daily.

PRINTERS HONOR MEMORY OF A. G. DAVIS

$25,000 FIRE IN BACK BAY

back in the south wing, ran to the fire escape, clambered down to the bottom of it and then dropped to the ground.

Paul Knight escaped from his fourth-floor suite in his pajamas. He estimated his loss at $1,000 on furniture and clothing.

Henry Belgard on the second floor put his loss at $400. Dr. Edwin Shaw's loss is $250. Miss Alice W. Peabody was in her second-floor suite. She seized her jewels and ran out. She figures her loss at $250. William Rosenfeld estimates his loss at $800.

Others who lost their possessions are: Miss G. R. Neeley, Miss Kerrigan, Miss Riley, Miss Savage and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Wilson.

Mrs. Wilson was burned about the face and part of her hair was singed off.

Fire Chief Mullen said afterwards that the fire probably started in the south side of the basement. It swept through the basement driving out the janitor's wife with her baby on the north side.

When the firemen arrived the flames had worked up to the first floor and were being sucked up through the air shafts to the fourth floor. A second and third alarms were quickly sounded.

The flames damaged the first floor much. Skipping the second and third floors, the fire attacked the fourth floor so fiercely that this floor was burned out. Holes were burned through the roof also.

The fourth floor was damaged the most of all. The second and third floors suffered water damage. It was reported early in the fire that the Bryant apartments on the south side were on fire. This report was started when firemen were seen on the roof of the Bryant. They went there to gain vantage point from which to play hose streams on the roof and through the fourth floor windows of the Terrace.

Neighbors Alarmed.

From the exterior the fire could be fought to advantage. The Hemenway street front gave easy approach, through the central court formed by the horseshoe was choked with smoke. On the back the Terrace is bounded by a wide stretch of open land, extending back to the Charles river. This also gave good approach.

The flames on the first and fourth floors worked around from the south side, through the back of the horseshoe and around to the part of the north side.

Occupants of the Bryant apartments were afraid that their building would be ignited. The Conservatory Dormitory on the north side is practically vacant during the Summer. Tenants of the Washington B. Thomas flats across the street also feared for a while that they would have to get out.

But, with streams playing on front, back and from the roof of the Bryant on the south side, the firemen fairly drowned the blaze. The water damage will be heavy. The suites were all well furnished. The large number of pianos in the building, all damaged by water, will add to the loss.

When firemen tried to approach the building from the front when they first arrived, the smoke, gathering in the central court, drove them back gasping. Volunteers were called for to help at other points till the regulars could maintain their attack on the front. Several citizens responded by jumping to the hose lines.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT IN MARKETS

Native blueberries are relatively the highest priced delicacies in the Boston market. They still sell for about 25 cents a box. The long continued drouth in the New England States is responsible for the high prices and the rather poor quality of native berries. The Southern blueberries sell for about 15 cents a box, but in most cases do not stand shipment well and the berries do not reach here in prime condition.

Native strawberries also remain high. The receipts in the Boston market are far below normal, both as to quality and quantity.

Swordfish are more plentiful now than they have been at T wharf in five years, and recently have sold at the wharf as low as 6 cents a pound. The wholesale price to-day is about 8 cents and the retail price 15 cents a pound.

Cantaloupes are very plentiful in the Boston markets. They sell at prices ranging from 5 to 15 cents.

The supply of Southern peaches is large this year, but the demand keeps the price up. The prices remain at about the same figure as last year for the different qualities.

MAYOR JOINS CHAMBER TOUR

BY FRED J. M'ISAAC.

Special representative of the Sunday AMERICAN with the Chamber of Commerce tourists.

ESSEN, Germany, July 8.—The members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, joined in Paris by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, reached this place to-day and visited the famous Krupp gun works.

The party came here from Dusseldorf, Prussia, where they were lavishly entertained. The visitors were royally received in Brussels, where they saw the great docks and unfinished sea canal.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the visiting delegation, told the people of Brussels that the American visitors had been greatly impressed by the beautiful city and the remarkable things the people were doing along social, civic and industrial lines.

A full-page story by Mr. McIsaac on the Chamber of Commerce tour will be published in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

ICE FAMINE NOW BROKEN

The ice famine in Boston has been broken. During the latter part of this week, when the city broiled in the blaze of the hottest wave that ever swept over New England, the poor of the North, South and West Ends of the city were unable to get ice in small quantities, such as they necessarily had to purchase.

Men and women staggered frantically through the streets, going from one place and another where ice might be procured, and begged for it pitifully, but mostly in vain. The saloons and big customers were able to get ice, but there was none for the poor.

The AMERICAN brought the attention of the officials of the city to this lamentable situation, and even sent wagons of ice into the congested districts so that the babies at least might not suffer. Though the demand of the AMERICAN the hucksters who sell to the poor were able to secure ice for their customers.

Dr. Samuel H. Durgin, president of the Boston Board of Health, induced the railroads to co-operate with him in hurrying delayed ice to the city. More cars were put on and ice carried here in such quantities that the dealers could not well say, as they had been doing, that they were out of ice.

But better than all that was the change in the temperature that came with Thursday evening's rain and continued yesterday. The ice conditions to-day were reported to have assumed their normal proportions, and, so far as could be learned, everybody was supplied.

MARINE PICKET WINS 7 STRIKE-BREAKERS

Seven New York strike-breakers brought on to man the United Fruit Company liner San Jose were captured by a detail of pickets from the Marine Firemen's Union at the South station. No violence accompanied the capture, which was accomplished wholly by peaceful persuasion. The San Jose was still anchored off the Commonwealth Flats, twenty-four hours late in sailing for Port Limon because of the strike called Friday for a complete recognition of the men's union. More than 100 pickets have been placed on guard at the various wharves to prevent the shipping of a new crew on the struck steamer. Another picket detail is scouring the harbor in a naphtha launch, and still others are watching the railroad stations. They are in charge of Alexander Morgan, business agent of the union, and Hugh Edmondson, assistant agent.

OVERCOME BY THE HEAT

Another sad result of the hot wave is just reported. For more than a year she had been in excellent condition, but yesterday she broke down and was taken tenderly and lovingly where so many of her brothers and sisters have been skilfully treated and restored to perfect health. Are you having trouble? You ought to know that Wilson Bros. have 10 skilled watchmakers and do one of the largest watch repairing businesses in Boston. Their only store, next to the Big Tea-kettle, is a safe place to trade. Open evenings.

HUNT CLEW ON STOKES LETTERS

NEW YORK, July 8.—Indictments will be asked of the grand jury, it was reported to-day, as the result of the sensational evidence given before Magistrate Freschi in the Tombs police court by Joseph Cummings, house detective of the Ansonia, during the examining trial of Miss Lillian Graham and Miss Ethel Conrad on the charge of shooting W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire proprietor of the Ansonia. Cummings made the amazing statement that after the shooting, and right under the noses of three of the city detectives who were in the room, he seized and carried away the package of letters written by Stokes to Miss Graham, and to secure which he made the visit to the girls' apartment that culminated in the pistol play.

Cummings then, according to his own testimony, turned the letters over to A. H. Gleason, attorney for Stokes, upon whose advice he said he had gone to the girls' apartments. Gleason, he testified, kept the letters three days and then returned them to him with instructions to guard them carefully.

Miss Graham and Miss Conrad declare that there were eighteen letters in the package. Only part have been produced in court and the belief obtains that five others, and most important, have been destroyed. Cummings swore that he did not know how many letters were in the package when he took it.

Cummings testified he had visited the apartment of Misses Graham and Conrad in the Varuna two days after the shooting, while three city detectives were there as custodians of the evidence for the public prosecutor. He declared he found the missives in a closet. This statement the girls asserted to be absolutely false, as they remembered distinctly placing the letters in Miss Graham's trunk.

The girls openly accused the witness who told of seizing the letters of committing a theft, and denounced the manner in which the police aided in the upbuilding of the case against them and in the possible destruction of their only means of defence.

In spite of the fact that it was known within an hour after the shooting that Stokes had gone to the apartments where he was shot to obtain these letters, in spite of the accusation by Stokes that an attempt was made to blackmail him by the threatened use of these letters and in spite of the fact that the girls demanded that their effects be kept intact for inspection by their counsel, the city detectives for forty-eight hours failed to find the evidence and allowed two outsiders to enter and escape with the documents.

"The story," said Miss Graham, "told as to the finding of the letters is absurd. This private detective makes a fool out of me. Does any one believe for a moment that I would carelessly throw these letters, which Mr. Stokes deems of sufficient importance to risk his life to get, according to his own story, into a closet, where any one could find them? There were eighteen letters in this package when I last saw it."

"I am sure of that," chimed in Miss Conrad, "for I counted them myself."

"These letters," continued Miss Graham, "were not on any closet floor in the apartment. They were in the bottom of my trunk. I placed them there myself, and they were there when I was arrested and taken away. The trunk was not locked, as I was so excited over the occurrence that I overlooked locking it when I was taken away."

MRS. COLT TO SEEK DIVORCE

houses in the neighborhood said that the Colts had not lived there for some time. At the Holland House, where usually he lives when Mrs. Colt is on tour, it was said that he had not been there recently.

Asks $250,000 Settlement.

The facts connected with the bringing of the suit for divorce that have reached the East are meagre. The news that has come from Los Angeles is that Mrs. Colt, yesterday, in company with Miss Drew, a daughter of John Drew, the actor, went by automobile to an obscure notary public in the suburbs and made proper affidavits to the legal documents in the case.

It is understood that she asks a property settlement from her husband of $250,000 on behalf of herself and their year-old child.

It was said that a young man with the papers in the case started to New York yesterday from Los Angeles.

In November last came a report from New Orleans to the effect that Mrs. Colt and her husband were about to separate. The actress was playing at the Tulane. The story was that on a certain night Colt did not accompany his wife to the theatre there, but started out alone for a stroll through the city. It was said he did not return to the hotel until a late hour, and then with one arm seriously injured from having been caught in the door of a taxicab.

At that time Mrs. Colt and Colt both telegraphed to the AMERICAN denying the separation rumor. Mrs. Colt's telegram said:

> Story that Mr. Colt and I are about to separate is malicious and ridiculous fabrication. Mr. Colt is with me and has been since I left New York.

Family Council Called.

Young Colt is known to have sown many wild oats, and his marriage was expected to place a check upon him. It is asserted by friends of Miss Barrymore, however, that information came to her which she could not overlook. She then decided to ask for absolute divorce. In this step she had the counsel of her uncle, John Drew, and her brother, Jack Barrymore, after a family council.

She has gone to such extremes to keep the action secret that she solicited from Klaw & Erlanger a tour of the West at this time in order to take her away from New York. As the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fisk of New York, Miss Barrymore and Miss Drew have been living at the Hotel Hollywood.

Ethel Barrymore and Russell Griswold Colt were married secretly on March 14, 1909, at the rectory of the Catholic Church of the Most Precious Blood, at Hyde Park, by Rev. Fr. James J. Chittick. A double dispensation was necessary for their marriage, because it was Lent and to obviate the necessity of second publication of the banns.

Miss Barrymore was playing in Boston at the time and at the close of the performance Saturday night, March 13, 1909, she and Mr. Colt went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Fairchild of Dedham where they passed the night.

The next morning the bridal party went by auto to Hyde Park and Fr. Chittick performed the ceremony. The witnesses were John Barrymore, brother of the bride, and Roswell Colt, brother of the groom.

Income from Stage $50,000.

Miss Barrymore, so it is generally said in theatrical circles, earns more money than any other actress in the Frohman galaxy, with the single exception of Maude Adams. Her income from the stage is reported to exceed $50,000 a year.

She is the daughter of the late Maurice Barrymore, the actor. Her mother was Georgianna Drew and she is a sister of Jack Barrymore, the actor. She was literally brought up on the stage. She is a tall, dark-complexioned woman, vigorous and full-blooded, of more than the average weight, though not heavy set.

When Miss Barrymore became the wife of Young Colt it was published that she had refused the hands, at one time and another, of fifteen different men. While she was in London she was reported engaged to Laurence Irving, son of Sir Henry Irving; to Gerald Du Maurier, an actor, and to Capt. Harry Graham, formerly an officer of the Scots guards and at one time private secretary to Lord Rosebery.

Reported Engaged to Marry.

Among others to whom it was rumored she was engaged were Richard Harding Davis, E. Clarence Jones, Sir Robert Peel, Arthur Byron, Prince Ranjitsinhji, the Earl of Ava, Ernest Lawford, Robert W. Goelet, Charles D. Wetmore and the Duke of Manchester.

Russell Griswold Colt is one of the two sons of Colonel Samuel Pomeroy Colt, firearms manufacturer and president of the United States Rubber Company. The family home of the Colts is at Bristol, R. I. Young Colt is a Yale graduate. He has spent most of his time in Boston and New York.

According to Jack Barrymore, he introduced his sister to Colt in London when she was playing in that city. Colt is said to have $1,000,000 in his own right, with prospects of $10,000,000 when his father dies. He is tall, dark complexioned and athletic.

ROCKEFELLER IS 72 TO-DAY; PLAYS GOLF

CLEVELAND, July 8.—John D. Rockefeller is seventy-two years old to-day. The world's richest man isn't planning to pay any more attention to his birthday than the rest of us do, although most of the country will know it. He spent the day in his usual way—golf in the morning and a drive in the afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Bustard, who has been "showing" John D. how to play golf the last few games, played with him. Dr. Bustard was formerly a minister in Roxbury. Rockefeller is in as good health now as he has been for several years.

To Develop the Bust

I am so ashamed of my thin bust that I want to ask you if there is any harmless way to develop it. My hips and the rest of my body are right for the present styles and I do not want them any larger, but my bust is so flat that I would try anything that gave hope of even three or four more inches development.

MARY S.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription put up by The Dr. Kelly Co., especially for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among her own sex and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send 10c to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 89 G A, Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby had been weaned, the breasts became flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary flesh builders or tonics, as they increase the hips and limbs, and with the present styles the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

POTHIER WARS ON GAMBLERS

CRANSTON, R. I., July 8.—Governor Pothier's demand that Mayor Edward M. Sullivan investigate reports of open gambling in this city and close the gambling dens has resulted in practically an open declaration of war on the Governor by the Mayor. It is Governor Pothier's first open move against the gamblers and their political and official allies since the Sunday AMERICAN'S [illegible] report of how the gambling syndicate [illegible] law and order in Rhode Island.

"If you are not ready to remedy," wrote the Governor to Mayor Sullivan, "I shall act myself and use the machinery I command and such information as I have to wipe out any such places."

The Governor's letter says he expects only co-operation in trying to stamp out gambling, but in case this is not furnished he feels it a duty to take such measures as may be necessary. Cranston is mentioned in the Governor's letter as "one of the places" where gambling is alleged to be permitted to flourish. The letter follows:

"Hon. Edward M. Sullivan, Mayor of Cranston:

"My Dear Sir—For several days past there have been persistent reports current to the effect that gambling resorts are permitted to flourish in Rhode Island. Much publicity has been given these reports, greatly to the prejudice of the good name of the State. Your city is one of the places conspicuously mentioned in this connection.

"As Governor of the State I feel that the situation occasioned by such undesirable publicity warrants some official recognition. I therefore desire to respectfully bring this matter to your attention, and to request that you will take whatever steps are necessary to ascertain whether or not any such resorts exist in your city, and if so, to see that they are closed at once.

"I look for nothing, of course, but a ready compliance with this request. However, it is only proper for me to add that if the continued repetition of these reports is allowed to go unchallenged, I shall deem it my duty under the circumstances to act upon such information as I can obtain, and use the machinery at my command to suppress such places if they exist.

"Very truly yours,

"A. J. POTHIER, Governor."

To this Mayor Sullivan replied:

"Hon. Aram J. Pothier, Governor of Rhode Island, State House, Providence:

"Your Excellency—I am honored by a communication of Your Excellency relative to the reports in circulation to the effect that gambling is being permitted to flourish in Cranston, among other places in Rhode Island, greatly to the prejudice of the good name of the State, in which Your Excellency is pleased to suggest that action will be taken by the Governor if these reports are allowed to go unchallenged.

"Permit me to say in answer to this communication that I do not recognize the necessity or propriety of challenging these reports to which Your Excellency refers insofar as they concern the administration of the city government of the city of Cranston, which does not protect or tolerate gambling resorts or gambling in any manner or form, otherwise than by a prosecution of those engaged in the circulation of such reports for the civil and criminal libel which they are committing upon the persons to whose names they attach their defamatory lies.

"As Mayor of the city of Cranston I have no powers of magistracy outside of the limits of this city and as the publication of these reports was made outside of the limits of the city of Cranston I have no power to prosecute the authors of the defamation for criminal libel. I leave that matter to Your Excellency and the Attorney General. As a citizen I have entry to the courts for the prosecution of libel civilly and I will attend to that matter.

Threat of Prosecution.

"If gambling is being permitted to flourish in Cranston, the good name of the city of Cranston and therefore the good name of the State of Rhode Island, should be brought into reproach; but if the good name of the city of Cranston and therefore the good name of the State of Rhode Island, is being brought into reproach without justification, as is the case with the city of Cranston in the present instance, then the name or names of the person or persons charged with the duty of administering the authority of law in the city of Cranston is being defamed by those who are circulating such lies and such defamers should be prosecuted for criminal libel. I can assure Your Excellency that such a prosecution, based on the promise that such reports are false as to the city of Cranston will be successful.

"I beg leave to express my appreciation of the continued interest of Your Excellency in the good name and welfare of the city of Cranston, so often manifested since the incumbency of the office of Governor by Your Excellency.

"Very truly yours,

"EDWARD M. SULLIVAN,

"Mayor, City of Cranston."

Book Makers Quit.

As a result of the exposures of gambling in Rhode Island, made through the Sunday AMERICAN, bookmakers who came to Providence to do business in connection with the big Hillsgrove horse meet left in disgust.

It was plain that there is at least a temporary ban on gambling because of the protests of the people against the persistent violations of the gambling laws here, as revealed by Mike Slattery's confession to the AMERICAN, and facts gathered by Sunday AMERICAN reporters.

The Hillsgrove horse meet is in the town of Warwick. It was expected that it would furnish a golden field for the bookmakers. Fifteen of them were on hand to handle the business that they had counted on.

But the fifteen gamblers left this section without having taken a single bet. They left a trail of language behind them that smoked.

DR. WILEY JOINS IN WAR ON PUBLIC USE OF TOBACCO

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government pure food and drug expert, has joined the Non-Smokers of America, an organization whose object is to discourage smoking in public.

"I predict that within twelve years smoking and tobacco chewing in public will have become obsolete," said Dr. Wiley. "A man has a perfect right to drink, chew or dip snuff in his private sanitorium, but he has not the shadow of a right to inflict unwholesome smoke and his vile breath on the community at large. There should be a strictly enforced law prohibiting smoking and chewing in public places or on the cars where other persons are obliged to be."

The Tragedy of Beethoven's Life

All Who Suffer from

DEAFNESS

Can Understand It.

Many people say that Beethoven was the greatest composer of music that the world has ever known. He died away back in 1827, but every year sees his fame increase. Only last Winter, when the great New York Philharmonic Orchestra gave in Carnegie Hall a concert made up entirely of Beethoven compositions, the big house was jammed to the doors. Some place Beethoven with Shakespeare, Michael Angelo and Dante, and say that these four men are the world's supreme examples of genius.

Beethoven's early life was a long, hard struggle against poverty and the world's failure to understand him. But that is what most men of genius go through. The great tragedy of Beethoven's life came just as he was winning success. He used to wonder why people insisted on playing so softly. He would call out, "Louder! Louder!" Finally he dicovered what was the matter—he was going deaf. The horror of it! He traveled all over Europe trying in vain to find a cure. Like most deaf people, he was sensitive about his affliction. "People think I am absent minded," he wrote, "because I seem to pay no attention to what they say. I cannot bear to tell them that I cannot hear them. I cannot bring myself to ask them to speak louder."

Beethoven became stone deaf. He could not hear a note of his own wonderful music. Once he conducted the orchestra when his greatest work, the Ninth Symphony, was given. The audience was aroused to a frenzy of enthusiasm. The great hall rang with a tumult of applause. But Beethoven heard nothing. One of the musicians had to get up and turn him around that he might see the people applauding and thus be moved to bow.

Why a tragedy? Reader, there has been a great advance in science since Beethoven's day. Beethoven might have been cured did his physicians know as much as we do. I do not boast when I say that I personally have helped many, many people who were deaf. If you could see the letters of gratitude I have received, you would know that I merely state a fact. Now, several times I have advertised a Trial Deafness Treatment Free.

I am going to make this offer once more. If you are deaf or becoming deaf, or have anything the matter with your ears, write me a letter or a post card saying you want my free trial treatment, and I will at once send it to you. I don't care how discouraged you are. Many who have sent for my free trial treatment were so discouraged that they frankly said they had little faith in what I could do. Answer this advertisement anyway, even if you do it mostly out of curiosity—and you, too, will learn that my treatment really helps hearing. Remember that it won't cost you a cent.

Write to-day to Dr. Edward Gardner, Suite 463, No. 38 West 33d St., New York City, and get the trial treatment free.

NEW YORK BOSTON PHILADELPHIA

WHAT TO DO? HERE'S ANSWER

The wisest man in our town,
The wisest man, by far,
Invested him a five-cent piece
In an open trolley car,
And, when he'd used that nickel up,
What did that wise man then?
He pulled another nickel out
And he rode on again.
—TROLLEY TRILLS.

How about joy-riding for a nickel?

Fact! It can be done. It is done every day.

Nor does it require a gasoline horse wagon, a high-priced and haughty chauffeur, expensive automobile attire and elephantiasis (meaning bigness) of the pocketbook.

It requires simply a nickel and a regular trolley. You furnish the nickel. The trolley company will produce the car and all that goes with it.

You can go an amazing distance in Greater Boston for a nickel. You can come back for another nickel. You can go farther and back for two nickels. For a half-dozen nickels you can make a regular excursion of it—to Marblehead and back, for instance.

You don't have to go to Marblehead if you don't care to. You can go to Lynn Woods or to Lake Quannapowitt, Wakefield; or to Hough's Neck or to lots of other places and return for thirty cents.

You can go to all sorts of places for all sorts of small amounts. For a half-dollar you can enjoy a round trip to Nantasket Beach and hear what the "wild waves are saying, Sister," as someone has expressed it.

There is a booklet.

The name of the booklet is "The Sunday AMERICAN Summer Outing Trips."

This booklet has twenty-eight pages, paper-bound in pocket size. It tells about these trolley trips, breezy, beautiful trolley trips. No matter how much you know about Boston and its environs and about the trolley map, this booklet will tell you something new. It will suggest fresh ideas to you for dandy little trolley rides to where the wind blows and where the weary are at rest.

This booklet will be given FREE with every copy of to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN (in the Greater Boston district). But there is more than outing trips in the booklet. Look at this table of contents:

Popular Trolley Trips.
Trolleying Made Easy.
What to See in Boston.
Trolley Trips Around Boston and Its Environs.
Camping Out Around Boston.
Boston to New York by Trolley.
What to Do in Case of Drowning or Other Accident.
Poisonous Snakes and Plants.
Fish and Game Laws of Massachusetts.
Parks in the Metropolitan District.

You see that this booklet contains a variety of timely information, all useful in this Summer time of outing and recreation.

One might buy much of this information in separate books. Figuring each topic at a dime the total cost would be $1.10. In this Sunday AMERICAN booklet all the information is combined without bother to you—and FREE OF CHARGE at that.

Are you ever at loss for some nifty idea as to an outing on your day of rest?

Buy the Sunday AMERICAN to-morrow. Get the free Outing Booklet. It will give you more ideas in a minute than you can carry out all Summer.

JAMES R. KEENE NEAR COLLAPSE

LONDON, July 8.—James R. Keene, in care of De Courcey Forbes, has arrived at the Carlton Hotel from Italy, where he has been for some months in a sanitarium. The aged speculator has lost control of his faculties to the extent that he cannot concentrate his mind on any subject.

Mr. Keene is not allowed to be seen except by a few intimate friends. Although he occasionally walks around, his condition is considered very grave, and the nurses and doctors are constantly near him, believing that he is liable to break down at any moment. Mr. Forbes says he hopes to induce Mr. Keene to return to America.

Mr. Keene himself, in talking to a friend, is reported to have said that he realizes that he has not long to live, and so left Italy with the intention of making his way back to his home in New York.

FOUR DEAD IN PACIFIC WRECK

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 8.—The Pacific Coast Steamship Company's steamer Santa Rosa, which went on the rocks above Point Arguello light, to-day is entirely broken in half just forward of the mainmast, a total loss.

Of the 233 passengers and crew only four lost their lives, the remainder being landed safely on shore in the breeches buoy and large life rafts. The last one to leave the wrecked vessel was Captain J. O. Faris. The four men who lost their lives are Second Officer Ed Huston, Freddie Johnson, Ed Jebson and John Sheffick, sailors. They were drowned in the first attempt to carry a line ashore.

One hundred and ninety-two of the passengers were taken on board a train for Santa Barbara, arriving in the city at 2:30 a. m. to-day.

MONEY SHARKS' PLOT IS FOILED

The almost unprecedented speed with the Tinkham-Cavanagh loan-shark bill was pushed through the House and assigned for a hearing in the Senate Monday makes it one of the most important measures before the Legislature to-day.

Although the loan sharks and their agents are known to have threatened to kill the bill by hooking it up with a few skillfully worded "perfecting amendments (?)" in the Senate, little fear is expressed by those behind the measure that it will not sweep through the upper chamber in its present form. The warning given to the loan-shark emissaries by Senator Tinkham, as published exclusively in the AMERICAN, is thought to have settled that phase of the question.

Following the widespread publicity given the dread loan-shark evil through the expose of the Sunday AMERICAN, still further evidence of the abuse of power by the small-loan brokers of Boston continues to be unearthed.

Dorchester Victim Bled.

How an aged resident of Dorchester paid $305 on a four-year loan of $75, and still owed the loan-sharks the $75, is vouched for by Miss Caroline J. Coos, director and counsel for the law and thrift department of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union.

The loan-shark leech that bled this victim ran no risk of loosing the initial loan of $75, given to the old man's wife and daughter when he was ill. It was fully secured by a chattel mortgage on a horse and carriage, and the security was gilt-edged. But, by charging $5 for making out the first papers and renewing the mortgage every three months, which meant another $5 fee, and charging the old man $5 a month interest, the conscienceless money shark managed to squeeze out more than four times the amount of the original sum borrowed in interest alone while it was running.

Miss Cook has the name of the man in question, which also is in the AMERICAN'S possession, but it is withheld from publication at this time for fear of injuring him and his family. In the affidavit which accompanies his statement he is designated as Mr. "D," and his own story of the transaction reads in part as follows:

How Poor Are Fleeced.

"About four years ago I was taken ill. My wife and son, unbeknown to me, went to one of the loan companies. The man loaned them $75 and charged $5 for the papers, the rate of interest to be $5 a month.

"About the end of the fourth year my son got out of work. He had been paying this interest of $5 a month. My wife informed me that they had a loan down there. I went down and asked for the manager and told him they had paid about $200 on that loan of $75 (aside from the renewal and paper charges), and it seemed fair to me that they should reduce the interest in some way.

"After some talk with him he said he would make it $4 a month. In addition to that he said: 'I fully understand that your boy needn't pay another cent on this.' Evidently he feared that I might take advantage of this, for the very next month the loan was transferred to another company.

"Then, in April of this year, or March of this year, they notified my wife, who was at the hospital at that time with a sick child. I wrote them that she wasn't at home, and that I would call on Saturday, which I think was the 9th.

Used Lawyer's Name.

"There was a lady there—a woman, I couldn't call her a lady. She said: 'We want this money taken up Monday night at 6 o'clock.' I told her my child was in the hospital, but she said: 'We don't want any hard-luck stories, we want the money.'"

JIMMY CONWAY FOUND GUILTY OF PLAYING BALL

CONWAY BOY IS FOUND GUILTY

Judge Fallon heard the cases of James Conway and Andrew Trainor, two South Boston boys, in the juvenile session of his court today, and adjudged them both guilty of playing ball on Sunday, as was charged by Patrolman Flynn of the City Point station. He placed Conway's case on file and fined Trainor $2. The latter appealed and was held in $200 for a higher court, but his mother later withdrew the appeal and paid the fine.

Conway is fourteen years old and lives at No. 534 Seventh street. Judge Fallon said in regard to him that he had a very bad record for breaking and entering, larceny and malicious mischief, and had hitherto been treated very leniently by the court. "But," said the Judge, "he has been punished more than any boy ever was in Boston for playing ball on Sunday. He has been made a hero victim of journalism."

Passed a Night in Jail.

"Conway passed a night in jail after he was arrested and his case was given much space in newspapers. He was defended by former Senator James H. Vahey, while Eugene O'Connor, newspaper man and advocate of a law permitting Sunday ball playing, was present in behalf of Trainor.

The boys were members of a crowd of about eight who played all a week ago Sunday on or near I street. Two others had been arrested and their cases disposed of in the regular session of the South Boston District Court.

The first witness against Conway and Trainor was Miss Alice M. Riley, an elementary school teacher, who lives near where the boys played. She said they began at 1 o'clock and kept it up until 5. She said they used profane and improper language constantly. When a policeman came along, she said, the boys would run away and return after he had gone. She positively identified Conway and Trainir as being two of them.

Indentified by Policeman.

Her sister, Miss Ellen Riley, and her father, John Riley, corroborated her testimony and Patrolman Flynn said Conway and Trainor were two of the boys who had played ball on Sunday.

Attorney Vahey, for the defence, said that the evidence did not show whether the boys had played on public or private property, and that a violation of the law had not been proven. Judge Fallon ruled against him on this lw point.

LEAVE ON WALK OF 4,000 MILES

Bearing with them a letter from Governor Bass of New Hampshire and the oral good wishes of Governor Foss to Governor Johnson of California, two young men, Jesse H. and Warren H. Buffum, started from the State House on a 4,000-mile walk across the continent.

The two brothers set out clad in khaki, carrying only sleeping bags, one change of clothing, revolvers, a camera and a pocket searchlight, and two [illegible] diet lists especially prepared for them by Dr. Dudley A. Sargent of Harvard. It is for the purpose of experimenting with the effects of diet, physical exercise and outdoor sleeping that the trip has been undertaken.

"We expect to walk only about twenty miles a day, at first," said Jesse Buffum, "but as we get up to thirty and thirty-five. Our itinerary takes us through Worcester, Springfield, Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Chicago, Omaha, Lincoln, Denver, and here we have a choice of two routes, the selection of which will depend entirely upon the weather. If it is warm we shall take a northern course, through Laramie and Ogden, but if it is too cold we shall strike southward through New Mexico and to San Francisco, which is our goal, by way of Los Angeles."

PAPKE, AS CHAMPION, WILL DICTATE TERMS

By ED W. SMITH.

The middleweight limit of America is going to be raised as soon as Billy Papke gets back to this country.

Billy, as claimant of the world's title, is going to adopt the English limit of 160 pounds at 2 o'clock in the future.

That the Kewanee man can do this if he sees fit and make it stick is certain. Any champion can. All he has to do is to make the definite announcement and the other fighters will have to stick to his terms or go matchless.

And Papke will be the real big card of them all when he returns to this country next month. If the other fighters want to get a crack at him and the gate receipts that naturally will accrue when Papke "starts," they will have to meet Billy's terms in the matter of weight. It's a simple matter—simple for Billy, that is, but rather rough on the real 158-pounders who have been hoping that Papke hadn't outgrown the American middleweight limit of 158 pounds.

Prefers Boxing at 160.

Evidently he has, if the statements of the English sporting press are to be taken as authentic, and they usually are. Papke made the remark over there several times that he preferred boxing at 160, which was the figure he made in the recent international battle with Jim Sullivan, the English champion. This would have been hint enough even if Billy hadn't come out flatfooted and said that would be his scheme when he landed back in America.

This, it would seem, will be the first move yet made toward a thorough standardization of the weights of the world. Not so very long ago the National Sporting Club of London adopted a scale of weights for the decision of the English titular events. This scale was distinctly higher than the generally accepted American weights, and little attention was paid to it in this country.

Fail at Scale of Weights.

Strong efforts were made at different times to come to some sort of an agreement and make a scale of weights that might be termed international in their scope and power, but nothing ever came of the move. The recognized champion at the time made the poundage to suit himself and that was all there was to it.

For instance, when Battling Nelson became lightweight champion through his defeat of the decrepit and decaying Joe Gans, he made the lightweight limit, 133 pounds, at the ringside and stuck to it assiduously. His successor, Ad Wolgast, being a little fellow, who could make 126 pounds with some ease, saw some salvation in that figure and insists that all candidates for the crown come in at that figure.

Champions Make the Weight.

Hence, all must do so or go without a match. No amount of legislation could take the title away from Wolgast; that's certain. To become a champion a fighter would have to whip him, and in order to get into the ring with him every one must do 126 pounds at the ringside, or mighty close to it. Hence, no new weight could come into vogue unless some other lightweight held the title and was willing to make the figure 135 pounds or something of that sort.

So it is in all other classes. Papke beat Ketchel for the title in that Los Angeles scrap at 158 pounds, but since that time Ketchel turned the trick on Billy and the weight went to smash in a hurry, Ketchel paying little attention to the figure.

So we are now to have a new limit among the middles; that seems a certainty.

NEW YORK WANTS TO SEE BALDWIN BOX

The Twentieth Century Club of New York has wired Matty Baldwin's manager, Alec McLean, asking his terms to box Matt Wells for ten rounds. McLean also received offers for this same bout from the Armory A. A. of this city, but the inducements were not satisfactory. McLean wired the New York club his terms, which was the same guarantee as offered by the Armory A. A., but with a percentage.

The boxing club at Winnipeg, where Langford boxed Tony Caponi, has offered Baldwin a bout with Jack White, and McLean has wired a flat bid.

BASEBALL CHATTER

"Hank" Butcher has joined the Cleveland Naps and may be given a regular berth in the outfield. Butcher started as an infielder with a semi-pro club in Chicago. His reputation as a slugger led the Cubs to give him a trial, and he was taken South by them on the training trip of 1909.

He bit hard on that jaunt, but lacked class as a fielder. He was turned over to Evansville, and later purchased by the Philadelphia Athletics, who sold him to New Orleans. "Hank" is now an outfielder and he has been one of the best hitters in the Southern League. If he can continue to slub in the big show he will increase Cleveland's scoring power.

Most of the New York scribes have given up hope of seeing the Giants grab the pennant. It seems a little too early to quit. The McGrawites have made a miserable showing this week, but Chicago and Philadelphia may also be expected to slump some time. At that, the Cubs still appear to be the class of the league, even with Zimmerman at second base and Jimmy Doyle at third.

Neither the New York nor the Chicago pitching staff is as strong as its manager would like to have it, but the Cubs back up their hurlers in better style and also play baseball with intelligence. Hard slugging and the nifty work of Alexander are keeping the Phillies in the fight.

Jean Gregg, the Naps southpaw, keeps right on winning and the Cleveland bunch would be farther down in the race if he hadn't been landed. He has won fourteen games out of eighteen and has numerous shut-outs to his credit. This is a wonderful record for a pitcher on a club with a standing like Cleveland's.

The team's percentage of victories is far below .500, but Gregg's is not much under .800. His latest accomplishment was shutting out the Athletics, 4 to 0. It was his first appearance against the world's champs, and it was also their first whitewash of the season.

According to the Cincinnati scribes, Clark Griffith wasn't having any picnic during the Red's last stay at home. The crowd was after the Red manager and, on one occasion, expressed its disapproval of his management by hissing him. This was after one of his players had been caught off third base, with him coaching, by one of Jimmy Sheckard's surprise throws from left field.

The fans undoubtedly would have known just what Sheckard was going to do if they had been in Griff's position. Cincinnati can't stand a loser and Mr. Griffith will be unpopular in Redland as long as his team drops more games than it wins.

He would be a hero if the Reds got into a winning streak and pulled themselves into the first division.

Boston is pulling hard for Hugh Bradley to make good at first base and to escape further accidents. The first base problem has been one of the hardest to solve this season. Alva Williams worked with some success on the job for a time, but he didn't satisfy the management. Engle is needed to fill in at other spots.

If Bradley can keep in shape to play, he may make the Sox infield look much better than it has at any time this year. What is needed most is a regular combination, to work every day until it acquires something like precision and smoothness. This is impossible with constant shifting.

JOHNSON PICKS A NEW LEMON

By RILEY.

Shortly after 10 o'clock on a moonlight evening in the first week of August Patrick Curran, a native of the Emerald Isle, a police officer by vocation and a pugilist by chance, will hit the boards inside a twenty-four foot prize ring situated in the football park in the fair city of Dublin. And thereupon Patrick will take a long unnatural sleep. But when he once again opens his eyes he will be a richer man by $2,500.

Curran may limit his moonlight trip to Dreamland to a few minutes. If he does, he will awake to see the face of Mr. John J. Johnson of Galveston, Texas, beaming down upon him with the tender affection of a long lost brother.

When Johnson wends his way through the clamoring crowd that will pack the football grounds in Dublin to its utter capacity on this particular night, he will have added $25,000 to his already bulky bankroll.

And Tom Flannagan will have pulled off a master stroke of business, while the followers of the world of Fistiana in the Old World will go home poorer but wiser men.

Sure Curran is Real Hope.

The funny part of the coming fight between Johnson and Curran is that the fans across the big swim firmly believe deep down in their hearts that a new heavyweight champion will be born in Dublin.

They are confident that Patrick Curran of all the white heavyweights in the world has been chosen by Dame Fortune to wrest the heavyweight crown from the grasp of Johnson.

And some 50,000 enthusiastic spectators are going to file into the football grounds confident of seeing the fall of the mighty.

Johnson has not fought a battle since he defeated Jeffries over a year ago. During this space of time he has traveled between this country and Europe several times, besides touring these United States of America in princely fashion time and again.

While playing the role of the prince Johnson has done little or no training. He has steadily gained in weight until now he tips the beam in the vicinity of 250 pounds.

His latest move has been to go to England with Tom Flanagan as his manager. Jack has attended the coronation, or at least he thinks he has, for the nearest that Johnson got to the real "stuff" was seated in one of his big honk wagons watching the parades go by from some shaded spot.

Flanagan to the Rescue.

And Jack saw his popularity decreasing. The people on the other side of the big pond were beginning to forget what Johnson did to Jeffries on that memorable Fourth of July. The crowds began to fall off at the music houses where Johnson was showing. As a result the Galveston negro was no longer the star attraction that he formerly was. Consequently the English theatre managers balked when he demanded fabulous prices for his appearance.

The wily Tom Flanagan saw that something radical must be done. His charge must once again show his skill as a fighter. He must enter the ring and win fresh glory. But Flanagan knew that Jack was in no condition to put up a stiff scrap. The champion also knew that he was away off his regular form.

"Go find something easy," said the "negro prince. "Match me with a fighter with a glass jaw, wooden legs, a novice at the manly art, but a national favorite," continued John J., as he let a glass of cold champagne trickle down his parched throat.

"An easy matter," said the wily Tom. "It is true that the lemon tree is native of a little further south, but I think I can come across with the goods for the love of my dear old meal ticket."

Jack and Patrick Matched.

And so Tom arranged for Jack to meet Patrick in Dublin town. "The winner," says Tom, "is to get $25,000, besides commission, while the loser is to call $2,500 his own."

Curran is an unknown, a novice at the fight game, defeated time and again, Johnson is the champion, a hard hitter, a clever boxer, a master at the art, and even while not in condition, a greater boxer than Curran can ever hope to be.

From this brief summary of the ability of the two men it can readily be seen that Johnson is going to pick a lemon in Dublin town. More glory for Tom Flanagan. That's all.

SOX CHANCE TO GET INTO 1ST DIVISION

Had the Highlanders hustled just a little harder yesterday and beaten the White Sox, Joe Wood's great pitching against the Browns would have served to put the Speed Boys into the American league's first division again. However, for the next three days Boston should be able to do better against the Wallace tribe than Hugh Duffy's boys can do against the Yankees, who are getting back into their real stride again.

GREAT BATTLE IN OLD LEAGUE

By SAM CRANE.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Five clubs are bunched in this hot National League race that we are now enjoying, and Roger Bresnahan's Cardinals have forced their way toward the top so far that the peepers of the "Big Four" who have had a mortgage on the first division all the season are now focused on the Kerry Patch Suffragettes who are having a good look at the topmost rung of the championship ladder.

It will be remembered, too, that Roger's Rajahs had the most successful trip of any of the Western clubs on the first Eastern invasion, winning eleven out of fifteen games or thereabouts, thus demonstrating that they are a good road team, and their two victories over the Phillies yesterday and the day before, as a starter for their second Eastern jaunt, forces Roger and his huskies to be acknowledged as a thoroughly dangerous factor in the race.

The complexion of this season's race is entirely different from many previous years, inasmuch as no club so far has been able to make a spurt of continuous victories. That, of course, is evidence that the five clubs now leading are more evenly matched than ever before in the history of the league. In no other season have five clubs had a chance to win a pennant with the race half over or nearly so, as this one of 1911 is now.

Consequently the Cardinals must be considerd to have about as good a chance right now to cop as either the Chicagos, Giants, Phillies or the Pirates.

Manager McGraw, while in Boston with the Giants on the latter's trip to that town, was willing to wager three to one that the Cardinals would not finish in the first divison, but just now I hardly think the offer of $300 to $100 would go begging in St. Louis.

The Cardinals have proved conclusively that they are not a flash in the pan. The games they played against the Giants in St. Louis showed a smoothness of system and teamwork that the Cubs, with their famous old machine, could hardly excel.

Miller Huggins has been a tower of strength to the Cards' infield, and if their pitchers hold out they ought to continue their sensational work to the end.

Surely it does not seem as if they were in any more danger of crumpling than any other of the "Big Four" teams.

The interest in the race has been largely added to by the Cardinals' surprising showing.

WOLGAST NETS OVER $50,000

The gross receipts from the Wolgast-Moran mill were nearly $40,000, of which Wolgast received a guarantee of $12,500. Moran got 35 per cent. of the net or about $9,000, leaving a handsome profit for Promoter Coffroth. Since he resumed fighting last February, Wolgast has earned nearly $50,000—$11,000 in two bouts with K. O. Brown, $6,000 in the Hogan fight, $4,500 with Memsic, $7,500 with La Grave, $7,500 with Burns and $12,500 with Moran. The champion has a third interest in the moving pictures of Tuesday's affair. He says he will make $5,000 more before the snow flies again if Welsh, McFarland and Brown come across with signed articles of agreement.

Oh, Joy! Oh, Gloom! Here's Powers Again.

Cheer up! T. E. Powers has some new, bright, breezy ones—they'll split your sides—in SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN.

K. O. BROWN MAY GET CHANCE AT WOLGAST

Wolgast, while eager to come to conclusions with Welsh and McFarland, is reported to be red hot for a 20-round battle with K. O. Brown at 133 ringside and would prefer to meet the East Side Dutchman first. Brown's manager, Danny Morgan, insists that his man can whip Wolgast, if only for the reason that Brown outpointed the titleholder in the memorable bouts in Philadelphia and New York. Wolgast practically admits that he was not in his best form on these occasions and is hungry for a chance to beat Brown decisively once and for all. Morgan talked a lot yesterday about making a match and if he is in earnest there seems to be no doubt that he will be accommodated.

FOOTBALL RULES ARE BEING DISCUSSED

Captain Joe Beacham and Lieutenant Cooper, the former Cornell's new member of the football rules committee and the latter the successor of Lieutenant Haskett of West Point on the same board, already are racking their brains for ideas that will lead to the provision of "scoring plays" for next season's campaign. Analyst Bert Reed, who writes so many good things about college sports as "Right Wing," has has arranged a football tete-a-tete to be held in New York the last of this month which will be attended by a coterie of real fans—just to talk things over.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAYER PUSHING FRED PARENT

Freddy Parent is being closely pressed for his position as shortstop on the Baltimore Eastern League team by George Twombly of Medford, Mass., who played on the Medford High School nine that won the championship of the Suburban League in 1910. Twombly joined Dunn's outfit early in the season, has come along splendidly and looks good for next Spring.

YALE PROFITS IN ATHLETICS

NEW HAVEN, July 8.—The report of the finances of Yale University athletics for the year ending August 31, 1910, just made public, shows that of the four major sports the football and baseball teams more than cleared expenses, while the track and crew ran away behind. The total receipts for the four teams was $107,221 and the expenses $101,978.

Other expenses and receipts to Yale Field brought the balance to $107,485. The track expenditures were $13,788, with receipts of $2,147; the football association expended $45,864 and brought in $72,960; the boat club association earned $2,234, while $19,069 was paid out, and the athletic association expended $13,788, with receipts of $2,147. The reserve fund shows a total of $119,960.

The largest receipts for the baseball team were from the Harvard games, $13,103, while the football team received $32,377 from the Princeton game, and $32,454 from the Harvard game.

It cost the baseball team $2,075 to travel and $2,514 for hotels and meals, and $303 for shoes and repairs to same. The football men spent $1,756 traveling with $5,440 for hotels and meals. To keep them well shod $1,325 was expended for shoes and repairs. Doctors and medicines cost $2,651.

CABLE FROM KELLEY SAYS HE WILL RUN

Herbert W. Kelley, America's best quarter-miler, will run in the intercollegiate meet at the Queen's Club grounds, Brighton, England, despite the fact that he recently sprained his ankle by a fall. A cable message was received in Winchester last night by Edward Kelley, a brother of the star runner, stating that Herbert was better and would run. This is welcome news to track enthusiasts in Boston, especially those who have seen young Kelley perform in local events.

M'INTOSH HAS FIGHT PROGRAM

LONDON, July 8.—Jack Johnson has agreed to meet the winner of the fistic tourney to be held by Hugh McIntosh, the Australian promoter. McIntosh has sent a cablegram to Sam Langford asking him to meet Bill Lang, the Australian champion, some time this Winter.

McIntosh has already matched Sam McVey and Al Kaufman to meet in either Paris or Australia. The winner will then be matched with Lang. McIntosh believes that Lang will be the winner of these elimination contests and Johnson and Lang have been matched to meet in the Stadium, in Sydney, N. S. W., Easter Monday of next year.

Johnson is arranging for a three months' tour of India, China, Japan and Australia. The champion will then go into training for the Lang contest.

ST. LOUIS, July 7.—The Red Sox and St. Louis Browns play again to-day and the fans will be out in force to watch the contest. The Speed Boys know the value of every win at this stage of the game and will go after to-day's clash in earnest. The feature of yesterday's game was the remarkable work of Joe Wood.

Wood was the whole works. For eight innings not a hit was made off him, the first ball to be driven from the infield being the third out in the nith, a fly to Speaker. Only two men reached first base in eight innings.

Fiften men fanned, five in a row in one period, but the most remarkable part of Joe's pitching was in the ninth. He gave signs of weakening after Nunamaker had been forced out of the game with a split hand in the fifth, but steadied instantly and put five men away via the strike-out route. With the score 6 to 0, Wallace went up to bat in the final inning. He drew a pass and Criss, who hit for Mitchell, looked to have been fanned, Silk giving him a pass, also. Then Shotten got the only hit off Wood, a single between Meyer and Wagner, which Hooper sent back to the plate, holding the bases filled. Wood again tightened up and Austin struck out; so did Schweitzer. Laporte was the Browns' hope. One of Joe's inshoots hit "Gladys" on the hand. That forced in the solitary run, and spoiled an otherwise wonderful exhibition of twirling. Hogan is now known as "Four Strike Out Hogan." Joe fanned him, leaving the corners crowded. It was Hogan's fourth time at bat, also his fourth strike-out.

There is an if in everything. If Black, who had fanned twice, had done so again in the eighth instead of lifting a fly to Lewis, Wood would have equaled the record. As it was, the fans of St. Louis are strong for the Kansas Cyclone, who pitched the one-hit game for a run that didn't belong to them, fanning fifteen men.

DEFEAT CAUSED BY HIGH LIVING

Word is received from the Coast that Moran will make a beeline for England, as his contract with C. J. Harvey has expired. The Englishman's friends attribute his poor showing on Tuesday to high living. They say Moran lost his head after stopping Nelson and threw discretion to the four winds. He paid no attention to the rules of training and for that reason he was an easy mark for McFarland. After that affair Moran began to walk the proverbial crack, but he had gone back so far that it was impossible to recover his former vitality.

BIKE RACES AT REVERE BEACH

There will be something doing at the Revere Cycle Track this evening, when George Wiley, Ray Duer and Percy Lawrence get together in a fifteen-mile motor pace event. Wiley has been substituted for Collins, and the Syracuse boy is anxious to take a fall out of Lawrence, who defeated him at the Revere track a few weeks ago.

Duer, the lanky Californian, has been in training at the Beach track for the past week, and Nat Butler, the veteran pace follower, is loud in his praise of the Californian's speed. The two-mile national championship event for the professional sprinters gives every indication of being one of the best events ever decided at the Beach oval.

ROXBURY NINE AND SAILORS TO BATTLE

There promises to be tall doings at the Charlestown Navy Yard on Sunday afternoon when the crack Roxbury A. A. baseball team lines up against the sturdy ball tossers of the U. S. battleship Vermont. The game is sure to be a battle royal throughout with the final result in doubt.

The nine which will do battle for the Vermont is one of the fastest in the navy and is sure to make the Roxbury aggregation go the limit if it is to win. Both teams are confident of winning.

In the Roxbury lineup will be found such stars as Henry Bond, "Bumper" Hayes, George Cushing, Bill Murphy, all of the Notre Dames of Roxbury. Then there is Leo Callahan and Lonzo White, the former star battery of the High School of Commerce. Callahan is one of the best southpaws in Greater Boston and should make the boys in blue go the limit if they are to win.

RUSTLERS WANT THE ODD GAME

folks in attendance could hardly believe their eyes when they saw Hub stick it out to the end of the nine rounds. But it was true that he did stick. Not only that, but he won a lot of friends in the very last inning by striking out Pinch Hitter Liz Beck, who did so much damage last time the Reds were here.

According to Old Bill Phelon, the Reds are after Bill Sweeney and Charley Herzog, and are willing to give Moren, McQuillan, Downey, Egan, the bat boy, Manager Griffith, Garry Herrmann, Secretary Bancroft, Jack Ryder, Larry McLean, his shin-guards, and Frank Smith and his son, Bud, for our sweet second base combination. Manager Tenney won't be able to see any such exchange as that, for Bill Sweeney is going at too fast a pace and Mr. Herzog is proving himself at least the equal of any shortstop in the game. Herzy doesn't confine his operations to fielding his position in sparkling manner. He also hits, and opposing pitchers would as soon see him come in a pinch as to have their arms cut off. Bill Sweeney is a pretty good man to have at the top of the batting list. The shift in positions seemed to agree with him, for he is having the best season of his career. Griff will have to come across with a real offer and include an athlete or two like Hoblitzell and Bescher before he can talk business in these parts.

The Reds have a pretty nice trio of peggers in that regular outfield of theirs. Bescher and Mitchell possess whips of steel and plenty of accuracy, and J. Bates isn't any frost when it comes to winging them around. A set of outfielders who can throw is something that gladdens the heart of a manager, and it's a pretty sure thing that Clark Griffith's heart can stand a little gladdening these days.

The Reds are tickled to death over the fact that the schedule gives them a Sunday in these parts. Few of them will be found to-morrow at their hotel. Everybody in the outfit is counting on a trip to some beach or other. It is hoped locally that they will so exhaust themselves to-morrow in the sad sea waves that they won't have any energy left to spend in the Monday game, which will be the last of their series here.

Yesterday's game was the first in which young Severeid has started as Cincinnati's catcher, although he has done some finishing for McLean and Clarke. He didn't make a brilliant showing by any means, but he looks like a good catcher, an exceptionally good one. His throwing is pretty, and he has hit hard since he broke into fast company. He is a Norwegian, and was picked up in the Central Association, a small league composed of Illinois and Iowa towns. His motions remind one of Lou Criger in that great athlete's palmy days.

YANKEE ATHLETES LIKE BRIGHTON TRACK

BRIGHTON, Eng., July 8.—The American athletes from Harvard and Yale who will engage the Oxford-Cambridge team on July 11, to-day put their o k on the Queen's Club grounds, where the games will be held. The seven Americans who yesterday practiced on the ground where the matches will take place declared that they were as fine as any in America. The English athletes are in excellent condition for the games, and sporting writers here predict that several new records will be hung up.

FIREMEN FIGHT ON DIAMOND

NEW YORK, July 8.—The Boston fire laddies were extremely confident this morning that they would win the first game of the series against the New York firemen to be played this afternoon on the Bronx Park. The Boston team, accompanied by a large band of rooters arrived in this city last night and they have had the best of times. Captain Potter of Engine No. 40 was the New York man put on the job to entertain them and he did. This morning the whole party went to Clason's Point for an outing and all hands had a great time, but the ball players took things easy.

"Bill" McDermott is slated to take the mound for the Boston team. McDermott faced the New York team last Summer in the game at Boston and he has credit of a victory and he is confident that he can repeat. Moron will do the catching. Both these firemen are connected with Station 9 and they have been working together for several seasons.

James Toland of Station 8 will be on first base, Joe Dunn of Station 40 on second, Jim Cronin of Station 25 on third and John McDermott of Station 30 will play the shortstop position. All are finished ball players and they comprise a formidable infield.

Dennis Condon of Ladder 9 will take care of the left field position, David Truesdale of Truck 13 will play center and Scanlan of Ladder 10 will play right field. All three are sure fielders and good hitters. Toland, Cronin and Scanlan are the new players on the team this season and this will be the first time that they have taken part in the series with New York, but all are good players and should play a fast game. Warren Stephens of Engine 23 and Charles Dalton of Engine 7 are the substitutes taken along.

The Story of an American Girl and How She Helped Her Husband Win

A SUCCESSFUL WIFE

A Really Great Novel by G. Dorset.
Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers

WHEN Stephen had finished and sat down, the opponent party broke forth against him in the speech of Senator Hendricks, and it was like turning a battering-ram on a flag fluttering in the breeze. I couldn't but feel it wouldn't have reached him anywhere.

When I went out later I saw Mr. Collins coming toward me, and as he shook hands, he said: "I have never heard such an appeal to the ideal!" By his face and his words, though he was awfully excited, I couldn't tell what he meant or how he felt.

And I went home quickly, alone, through the streets and up to my little room, and threw off my things. It was very warm, late as it was in the evening, and I thought that the room smelled unusually sweet; on my table was a florist's box addressed to me. It was a great bunch of violets. It gave me a sudden feling of sickness—a faintness.

Those flowers meant just one thing to me. At first I thought she must have sent them, and when I saw my husband's card I decided they had come to me by mistake. I couldn't believe that he would transfer that special order to me. They lay there, lovely and dark and grateful, rare for the season of Summer, and as I sat there fanning I got used to them and to their smell. In a little while my husband came in.

Back to Nevada.

"Esther, can you get ready to start for Nevada to-night? I'm going out as fast as I can. Collins is coming with us. I want to sink in the old hole, Esther. I want to offer my body up to the arrows."

It was on my tongue to say, "But you don't want me, do you?" But the fact that he had asked me was enough, and the only thing that hurt me in leaving—for I wanted to go—was leaving Cornelia Van Buren.

We got off in two hours' time, flying westward, and my husband was as gay as a boy, and perfectly delighted to be gone. When we were sitting out in the observation-car, Stephen said to me:

"Did you get those flowers from Pearson's this afternoon?"

"Yes, some violets came."

"Well?" He waited.

I didn't know what to say—they were personal, associated, thrilling to me, and sad. But I could see that he didn't feel it so at all, that he just sent them because they were violets, and nothing more. I wondered what on earth they could ever have meant to him, month after month, on the breast of the other woman.

What could they have signified that he could hand them now so simply to his wife? And I thought to myself: "I believe there's some deeper reason than I know or see, for he is so clever and so full of ideas."

"Did you want me to wear them, Stephen?" I asked him, and he smoked a few moments, and then answered:

"Why, I wanted you to do with them whatever pleased you, my dear girl."

"I put them in water in my room, on your table, where you wrote your beautiful speech."

It was a fine night, and the car went swiftly through it, and I couldn't see him in the dark, out of which he said to me:

"I'm glad you liked my speech. Thank you for telling me. I've been waiting for you to speak of it."

And somehow, when he said this, I realized that I hadn't mentioned a word to him about his speech in the hurry and the rush of getting away, of giving directions and orders, and of the excitement in feeling that he was going with me—going alone with me and far away.

On the Way West

We had decided, Mr. Collins and I, that not one word of politics was to be mentioned between us on the way out. Mr. Collins told me that he had personally telegraphed, with the reporters, my husband's speech to Carson City. Going westward we passed into the yellowy harvest. Mr. Collins and my husband were company for each other.

I was glad to be alone, for I was thinking and planning, and those days on the cars I had time to set things in order as I had not been able to do in Washington, when things were going on around me all the time, and I couldn't get near to them without being hurt.

Stephen had been going on, going on, these years at a great pace; from a worthless citizen he had climbed to be Governor of the State, and Senator, and I began to see that in my way I had gone along too.

Before we reached ——, where you make the change for Carson City, Mr. Collins came to me and asked me to talk with him for a few seconds.

"I shall want your help, Mrs. Kirkland. I am keeping his telegrams from him; he has an idea he won't be able to bear this reception and what he will have to meet. He intends, he tells me, laying down political life. If things are as bad as he thinks, I am inclined to believe it would be better that he should do so."

That afternoon my husband said to me: "You remember the week of the election at Carson City, Esther; there in that hotel, to please you, I took up politics. Now I have been coward enough to fetch you back here to stand by me while I lay them down. I couldn't face what I am going through without you, Esther."

And I said: "Perhaps they won't let you give it up."

And he retorted: "Why, don't you know what we are going to see? I can only say to you what I would not say to any one else in the world—the temptation to me to address the United States Senate from the chair I sat in was too strong. I have acted like an apostle, not like a public servant, and I am going to pay for it now."

I asked him, quickly: "Stephen, do you regret it?"

The Old Manuscript.

He smiled at me and said: "Why, it's a wonderful smiting off of the chains to me." And he asked me eagerly, as a boy might ask for a lost treasure: "Esther, you didn't throw away 'Lucia di Siena,' did you? You couldn't remember what you did whith that old manuscript, could you?"

And as I didn't answer he was too kind to make me feel badly, but I saw his face fall terribly. He gave a long sign, and said: "Never mind, never mind."

I understood him: it was the waking again of the old, old talent, the real one, the thing hid under the napkin, the real thing, the genius of him. It was getting too alive to be killed by his friends and his wife; I began to see the light of it on his brow and in his eyes.

"I can't remember all he said that day about his schemes and his new ideas and his new ideals, and the figures of speech he used about art and literature, and the things he said about materialism dwarfing the soul. He said he was a writer born, over and over again, and that he would turn like a thirsty deer to a stream and steep himself in the joy of creation, and that he would write a great book.

As he said this I remembered how he had seemed to me in Washington like a parched creature longing for the source. And yet I couldn't get my mind on what he was saying—it seemed too far away.

It was late Summer, and the plains were ripe; before we passed into the sterile State the very land seemed aching with wheat and green corn. Our train was poor; we stopped everywhere, and when we crossed into Nevada people crowded down to the station, to the junctions, and I saw them, and the freight loading and unloading, as in a dream.

It seemed to me to be a thousand years since we'd gone East from Nevada, yet it was only three years, and the woman coming back there in that train, sitting alone—Mr. Collins and Stephen were ahead in a seat—was a different woman from the one who had gone East with Senator Kirkland, and I began to see how very different indeed she was!

That woman was an animated Duty, and the one who was coming West was nothing but a woman. And in the other crisis I hadn't known what to do, and yet the right thing to do came easy. It was different now. I knew what to do, and yet I didn't believe I had the courage.

I didn't look at Stephen in the same old way, and I couldn't look at him sitting there smiling and gesturing with his thin, dark hands without a thrill at my heart, and that and a determination pushed me on to a selfhood of which I was ignorant. It was like a goad of thorns.

We stopped, it seemed for years, at a small mid-country station called Nutfield, though the only fields were the prairies lying under a pale, tender sky. Finally Mr. Collins left us to see what was the matter, and when he returned he told us that we'd have to go to Oretown that night and put up there, for there was an obstacle on the main line to Carson City, and the train only went as far as Oretown.

Stephen said: "Well, one place is as good as another for them to begin in," and I saw that he was horribly nervous and tired. He asked Mr. Collins why he hadn't given him the papers, and how it happened no wires had been received. And Mr. Collins told Stephen there was nothing for him, that he had asked along the line.

When we got out at the Junction at 8 o'clock there wasn't a soul in sight, and his relief was keen. He told me afterward that he had expected to be greeted by hisses, and that the people, like a band of roughs, were going to line up and throw mud at him, or something to that effect!

The streets were empty, and old Joe Bangs's buckboard was there to carry us over town. The only thing we noticed in the way of a demonstration was that Joe's horse had an American flag over his ear.

We rattled away through the thick road in the late Summer twilight, and, as far as I was concerned, I had the biggest feeling of rest that I'd known yet in going back to a place. It seemed to me like I was going home. Firesides had been temporary in my history, and there had always been so many people at them that my corner had been out of the glow.

My husband didn't even jolly old Joe—he was silent. His career had begun here, and it was going to end here, as far as he knew, in disgrace. The Cry must have had his speech out days ago, and little Oretown was as still as death when we drove into it; the population had gone on somewhere. There were only a few stragglers in the streets when we passed First Hotel; there wasn't a man sitting up with his feet on he rail spitting tobacco. I heard my husband ask:

"What's struck the town, Joe? The cholera?"

And Joe murmured that the town had gone to Carson City for the fair.

Mr. Collins said: "The traffic has been so heavy on the branch that the trains have stacked up."

As we drove past First my husband touched Joe on the shoulder. 'Hold up here."

But Mr. Collins said: "No, Kirkland, it seems that the old house has been fixed for you for the night. Some chap got wind that Mrs. Kirkland was coming, and they've given you a housewarming."

The Old House

It seemed to beam upon us from the windows and doors. There wasn't a soul to greet us, but it stood smiling broadly. It had been empty for a year, since the last tenant left; we had been renting it furnished all along.

Stephen took everything quietly, and in the kitchen the wife of First Hotel's proprietor was there with a colored girl, getting supper. I couldn't wait to get upstairs.

The sun had gone down, and I threw the windows of the west room open and looked out on the plain, where a double track of glistening rails shot out and away, and the stars were shining. The air smelled sweet, and my heart felt as if it would burst in my breast.

They had fixed the rooms next for Stephen and Mr. Collins, and on my bureau was a bunch of white phlox from Richard Baxfield's garden gone to seed.

Stephen continued absorbed and subdued. Mr. Collins, however, was in great spirits and jollied him up. We were all glad to go to our rooms early, and on in the night, when a shutter banged and blew, for the wind rose, I went into Stephen's room, and his window was wide open and the air blowing on him.

It was moonlight, and from his room you could see the garden, dark and deserted. Fanny's husband and the past entirely faded away, and only this moment was real to me. Fast as things had gone, and big as they had been, nothing had been quite real in my life until these last few months!

I closed the blinds. My husband was sleeping profoundly, his head on his arm, and it was wonderful to think how that single man had stood up there with a country against him and talked about "his ideal."

Whether they liked the pulse or not, it certainly had beaten for a moment through the Senate. The quiet of Oretown, and its desertion, seemed to me like a kindness of fate, to let him rest here and take a breath before the storm.

We took the first train out next day, and there was no station between Carson City and Oretown except the Junction, in the heart of the plains. We were five hours late, of course, on the short run, and it was night before we crawled into Carson City station.

The first thing I heard as our train ran in was a clash of music and the roar and cries of voices. The music broke suddenly upon us, the cries were so loud and shaking, it was like a flood that turned its tides upon us and shook us to our foundations.

A Great Welcome

The sea-like sound and the hurricane came surging to our car, and the first thing I knew the windows were full of faces and the car was filled up, and people were carrying banners and wore rosettes on their coats. There was something terrible about it and overpowering. We had the car to ourselves, and Stephen had been sitting alone near the end.

I saw him rise and stand . . . the people surged around him, and I saw him no more.

Seth Collins and Colonel Amos Babcock, president of the Carson City Central Bank, were at my side, and Mr. Collins said:

"They've got him, Mrs. Kirkland; you'll have to give him up to them; he belongs to Nevada! We'll look out for you."

The Vanity Box

HEREWITH is printed a short instalment of Alice Stuyvesant's wonderful story of mystery, to whet the appetite for the big opening instalment which will appear to-morrow in Sunday's AMERICAN. It is one of the most remarkable novels ever printed serially in a newspaper and will hold the reader's attention to the last line by reason of the subtle working of opposing forces in a fog of mystery, no less than by the graceful vividness of the writing. Don't miss the big opening instalment in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN—better order it of your newsdealer to-day.

PART ONE.

"PLEASE let Mrs. Forestier know that Sir Ian and Lady Hereward have come."

"Yes, my lady. She is in the rose-garden. I will tell her at once," said the butler, who had opened the door.

He rather expected that the visitors would propose going out of doors to find his mistress; for they had been away for a fortnight, and Lady Hereward was a great admirer of the rose-garden, which was now at the height of its June glory.

But the weather that day was sullenly hot, with a still, perfumed heat like the heat of the tropics, and Lady Hereward was looking tired.

Evidently, as there was no motor or carriage at the door, she and Sir Ian must have walked the two miles and a half from Friars' Moat to Riding Wood House, and though most of the way—taking the short cut—lay in forest shadow, this windless heat would be oppressive among crowding trees.

The butler moved toward the drawing-room door, but Lady Hereward stopped him. "We will sit here in the hall," she said. "It's delightfully cool." So speaking, she pushed down the long gray glove on her right arm, glancing at her bracelet watch.

"We're very early," she went on. "We must have walked faster than we thought. We allowed ourselves too much time."

In pulling down her glove, Lady Hereward dropped something which fell noiselessly upon a polar-bear rug, and lay glittering, half buried in the silver-white fur. "My vanity box!" she exclaimed. "Stupid of me! I'm always dropping it."

The butler stooped rheumatically to pick up the little gold case, but the lady's husband was before him, and the old servant pottered away to call his mistress, thinking, as he had often thought before, how charmingly courteous Colonel Sir Ian Hereward invariably was to his wife.

She liked and needed a good deal of attention, a good deal of waiting upon, as the observant Brewster was well aware; yet Sir Ian never failed, never seemed bored or impatient, as many husbands did after years of marriage.

But then, if he were more devoted than ordinary husbands, her ladyship was more attractive than ordinary wives. Not that she was precisely beautiful, nor was she precisely young.

Like a Proud Madonna.

Every one knew the distinguished officer's age—forty-one; and Lady Hereward was said to be some months older than Sir Ian, who was her distant cousin as well as her husband; but she did not look a day over thirty; and if she were not a beauty, she was interesting and unusual. "Like a proud sort of Madonna," the old man described her to himself as he went toward the rose-garden, to tell Mrs. Forestier that her luncheon guests had arrived, a little earlier than expected.

There was a portrait—one among many on the oak-panelled walls—which for some reason fascinated Sir Ian Hereward; and whenever he came to Riding Wood, he always stood in front of it, even if he had to find some excuse for doing so, looking up at the painted, unsmiling face with a curious, reluctant interest, as if he saw it for the first time.

It was not necessary to invent an excuse now, since he was alone with his wife, waiting for their hostess to appear; nevertheless he walked about the hall a little, before making his way to the portrait, picking up a book or two on the fat-legged Jacobean table in the middle of the flagged floor, and then moving on by slow degrees, pausing here and there to glance at some other portrait.

This was not a deliberate plan carried out to cloak his real intention, unless from himself, for he had no idea that his wife knew or cared about his interest in the picture; yet he was always drawn to it, in spite of a certain desire to resist.

Knew His Reason

He tried to persuade himself that he thought of that portrait as he thought of others in the hall at Riding Wood, merely as a fine piece of work by a great artist. It had been painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds and was a family treasure. Only a few years ago it had gone away to an exhibition, having been lent by Mr. Forestier, since dead, and during the time of its absence Sir Ian had not visited Riding Wood.

When her husband began his wanderings around the hall Lady Hereward seized the opportunity to open her vanity box and look at herself in the tiny mirror inside. She knew perfectly well what Sir Ian's goal was and that, having reached it, he would not be likely to move until he heard Mrs. Forestier's footsteps.

She knew perfectly well, too, why he was drawn to the portrait, and the fascination it had for him annoyed her extremely; still, as she scorned to refer to the subject, the fact remained that he would look at the portrait, and she might might as well avail herself of the three or four minutes during which his back was turned.

The complete first instalment of "The Vanity Box" will be printed in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

A Sure Sign of Eczema
One of the surest signs of eczema is itching, and the very first step toward a cure is to stop the itching, because scratching makes the trouble worse. Apply a little Cadum to the affected part, and the itching will stop immediately. The sores will begin healing at once, and soon the disease will disappear. Cadum is the best remedy for many other forms of skin troubles, such as redness, pimples, roughness, blotches, rash, scaly skin, chafings, acne, sores, ulcers, eruptions, hives, tetter, itch, herpes, psoriasis, itching piles, ringworm, etc. Cadum covers the sores, excludes the air, dirt and disease germs and thus hastens the healing process. A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture

LOTS OF SPEED, PAL! ROSAMOND YOUR LOVER CLAUDE IS TIED TO THE HORSES AND THE BORNEO FLYER WILL SOON MANGLE YOUR BUNK HERO. THEN YOU MUST BE MY WIFE!
I DEFY YOU
I'LL NEVER MARRY YOU DESMOND!
BARNLINGS CIRCUS
THE ENGINEER IS BLOWING THE DANGER SIGNAL. ONCE ON THE RAILS WE CAN HELP HIM WITH OUR ROLLERS!
WE'RE ROLLING GREAT NOW TO CUT THE ROPE AND SAVE THIS MAN
SAVED! BUT WHERE IS MY DARLING ROSAMOND?
CURSES! CLAUDE IS RESCUED BUT YOU WILL PAY FOR THIS MY PROUD BEAUTY HA, HA, HA!
SO YOU WOULD DRAG ME OVER THOSE HUNDREDS OF CAMP FIRES. I HATE YOU DESMOND. I LOVE ONLY CLAUDE ECLAIRE!
HERSHFIELD

On comes the Borneo Express! On dash the horses of Desperate Desmond and his brutal allies! In a moment Claude Eclaire will be shattered against the cowcatcher of the locomotive. An ignominious death for a hero, but then none of us can foretell how the end is to come.

Aboard the train the engineer sees the danger ahead and blows the whistle loudly. But he cannot check the speed of the heavy train in time to save our hero. He must wait helpless until the tragedy occurs. It is a situation to snap the strongest nerves, but the engineer scorns to desert his post.

Ah, the whistling has aroused those aboard the circus cars of the Borneo Express. The Roller Boller Brothers, the world's greatest roller skating experts, leap to the top of their car and glide along the roofs. Roller skaters on the sidewalk are a nuisance, but here they are in right.

Gracefully the brothers slide down the front of the engine and gracefully they balance themselves on the rails, as the train pushes them along. Years of practice have made them as much at home on roller skates as a duck is on the water, and a duck is perfect without practice.

The rope is severed and Claude is saved. But the villain Desmond still has Rosamond in his power and he swears that she shall pay for the escape of her lover. How often the innocent suffer for the acts of another! Rosamond's love renders her brave and she does not whimper as she is borne away.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, as he gallops off with Rosamond bound in the way Claude has been. He intends to drag the beautiful girl over a long row of campfires and thus torture her for her loyalty. Is it possible for Claude to save her? To-morrow's pictures will show.

"DESPERATE DESMOND" IS NOW A REGULAR FEATURE OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN. DON'T MISS THE THRILLING ADVENTURES OF CLAUDE ECLAIRE AND HIS ROSAMOND IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

The Manicure Lady

She Discusses the Barrel-Hoop Hug With the Head Barber

"THAT Gambier case has got me kind of up in the air, George," said Manicure Lady, as she sat in her cool corner of the shop, hankering for hangnails to conquer.

"I didn't see much about it in the papers," said the Head Barber, "but from what little I did see I think the old chap got about what was coming to him. I don't see what a middle-aged gent wants to marry a young girl for. Why didn't he get his bankroll together and go down East somewhere? I used to live up there, and I know a lot of thirty-year-old spinsters that would have made him grand wives. I don't know how strong they would be on the barrelhoop hug and the submissive kiss, but at least they wouldn't be going out with any Mister Blanks, and it seems to me that ought to help some."

Not a Romeo

"She says that he didn't act like a Romeo," said the Manicure Lady. "She said if he had been less of an old woman and more of a true lover there would never have been any trouble. She testified that he only kissed her five times a day, twice in the morning, twice in the afternoon and once about dinner time. Wilfred is so interested in the case that he is writing a poem about it to send to one of the magazines. He ain't particular which magazine it is, just so the editor is careful and knows enough to send the poem back and not steal the stamps. It goes something like this:

"'You kissed me five times in a single day,
My king;
Twice in the morning, twice at noon of day,
And once when I your steak did bring,
My king.'"

"That's enough," said the Head Barber, hastily. "I don't want to hear any more kissing songs. I shouldn't think that you would be much interested in them either, after all the mush that you get handed out to you during the course of your day's work. All I've got to say is just what I said before—I think the old boy got his just dessert, or whatever you call it. Why should December seek to mate with July?"

He Meant July

"You mean why should December mate with May?" suggested the Manicure Lady.

"No, I mean 'July,'" corrected the Head Barber. "July is a hotter month. Let me tell you one thing, kiddo, and that ain't two things. I had an uncle that had been all over the world. That ain't such a terrible boost for a fellow, because lots of waiters has been all over the world; but this particular uncle of mine was supposed to be some wise guy. He was my mother's brother, and she had often told me how kind and wise he was, so I was prepared to like him. I did like him, too, when he first came back from his travels abroad, and I would have bet a ten-dollar note to a cent that he knew enough to get by anywhere—and what do you think he did? He went and got himself engaged to a sixteen-year-old girl.

"She was the friend of a vaudeville sister team that happened to be playing the big time here in the East, and he thought she must be mighty swell if she was trailing with them young stars, so he proposes to her. She accepts him, and inside of a year they break up. It wasn't her fault. A girl has only one youth, and she wants to make the most of that. The old boy wanted her to be sitting in the library trying to find out why Julius Napoleon crossed the Hellespont. She was right to quit him, at that. Here comes an old guy now, looking for a haircut. He's lucky he's got any hair left."

PART TWO—(Concluded)

"O forgive!" she muttered. "I—I—loved you, Rupert—with all my soul!"

She seemed to sink a little, to shrink, to pass from a struggle to peace. The lines of despair fled from her face. She lay there in white beauty, a lily whiteness but little marred by traces of the make-up hurriedly wiped off her cheeks and forehead.

"May the Lord be merciful to her!" said Furneaux, and without another word, he hurried from the room and out of the house.

Winter, having secured some degree of order in a distracted household, raced off to Marlborough Street; but Furneaux had been there before him, and Osborne, knowing nothing of Hylda Prout's death, had flown to Porchester Gardens and Rosalind.

The hour was not so late that the thousand eyes of Scotland Yard could not search every nook in which Furneaux might have taken refuge, but in vain.

Winter, grieving for his friend, fearing the worst, remained all night in his office, receiving reports of failure by telephone and messenger.

At last, when the sun rose, he went wearily to his home, and was lying, fully dressed, on his bed, in the state of half-sleep, half-exhaustion, which is nature's way of healing the bruised spirit, when he seemed to hear Furneaux's voice sobbing:

"My Mirabel, why did you leave me—you whom I loved!"

Instantly he sprang up in a frenzy of action and ran out into the street. At that early hour, soon after 6 o'clock, there was no vehicle to be found except a battered cab which had prowled London during the night; but he woke the heavy-witted driver with a promise of double fare, and the horse ambled over the slow miles to the yews and laurels of Kensal Green Cemetery.

There he found him, kneeling by the side of that one little mound of earth, after having walked in solitude through the long hours till the gates were opened for the day's digging of graves. Winter said nothing. He led his friend away and had him cared for.

The Lifted Cloud

Slowly the cloud lifted. At last, when a heedless public had forgotten the crime and its dramatic sequel, there came a day when Furneaux appeared at Scotland Yard.

"Hello, Winter," he said, coming in as though the world had grown young again.

"Hello, Furneaux, glad to see you," said Winter, pushing the cigar box across the table.

"Had my letter?"

"Yes."

"Who has taken my place—Clarke?"

"No, not Clarke."

"Who, then?"

"Nobody yet. The fact is, Furneaux——"

"I've resigned—that is the material fact."

"Yes, I know. But you don't mind giving me your advice?"

"No, of course not—just for the sake of old times."

"Well, there is this affair of Lady Harringay's disappearance. It is a ticklish business. Seen anything about it in the paper?"

"A line or two."

"I'm at my wits' end to find time myself to deal with it. And I've not a man I can give it to——"

"Look here, Winter, I'm out of the force."

"But, to oblige me."

"I would do a great deal on that score."

"Get after her, then, without a moment's delay."

"But there's my resignation."

Winter picked a letter from a bundle, struck a match, set fire to the paper, and lighted a cigar with it.

"There goes your resignation!" he said.

During the following Summer Rosalind Marsh and Rupert Osborne were married at Teignmouth. It was a quiet wedding, and since that day they have led quiet lives, so it is to be presumed that they have settled satisfactorily the problem of how to be happy though rich.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

OCCUPATION NO BAR.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen, considered good looking and deeply in love with a young lady of the same age.

My position is that of driver. Her parents have seen me on my wagon and they think me unworthy of their daughter.

I know and feel that this young lady loves me. Please advise what to do in order to get her parents' consent.
L. M. W. S.

WHATEVER your occupation, if performed to the best of your ability, it ranks with the highest.

Your character and purpose in life are to be considered. If your affection for this young woman be sincere, you will overcome all obstacles, and the truth will be clearly represented and appreciated. The parents will eventually learn to overlook what is merely external and detect the real value of character.

SHE WILL APOLOGIZE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is a woman not bound to apologize, just as much as a man, for a similar offence?

Where I work is a woman who will make cattish remarks and afterward ask a favor, or talk as if nothing had happened.

She never apologizes. I am avoiding her and intend to ask for an apology the first time she speaks (not about business.) Is this not the right course to pursue?
C. F. D.

SHE will probably be pleased that you desire an apology. She likes you and, not being able to draw your attention by other means, she makes herself noticed through cruel words or actions.

Naturally, the one who offends should apologize.

Anty Drudge sets Mrs. Boarder right as to the Modern Washday.

Mrs. Boarder—"Yes, my husband would rather be in his own home than boarding; but when I remember those dreadful wash-days and the sickening smell of boiling suds, I'd rather board."

Anty Drudge—"You wouldn't have had any sickening smell of boiling suds if you had used Fels-Naptha soap and cool or lukewarm water. Neither you nor any one else would have known washing was going on in the house."

Plenty of reasons why you should wash the Fels-Naptha way.

The least labor.

The least bodily distress.

The least wear and tear on hands and fabric.

And the result, the cleanest, whitest clothes you ever saw.

That's why you should use Fels-Naptha soap. Boiling and hard rubbing are done away. You soap the clothes, roll and place them in cool or lukewarm water. Then you rub lightly, rinse and hang out. Every fibre is clean and pure as it came from the loom.

One trial will convince you. You will no more return to the old way, than you would strap a pack on your back to carry throughout the day.

Follow carefully the directions on the red and green wrapper.

ATWOOD PUT IN DANGER BY DOG

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 8.—Harry N. Atwood, the young Boston aviator, showed no ill effects to-day from his close call with death when an inquisitive bulldog, snuffing at the swiftly revolving propellers of his aeroplane, brought about an unusual mishap.

Atwood was just starting his biplane, in which Charles K. Hamilton was to be a passenger, on the last lap of his 510-mile aerial trip from Boston to Washington when the dog poked his nose into one of the propellers. The dog was killed and one of the blades of the propellers slightly split. The engines were stopped and Hamilton, after getting a piece of wire, repaired the damage to the propeller.

Then the pair got into their seats once more and again the engines were started. The machine ran over the hard sand and quickly was high in the air. Atwood and Hamilton rose to about 200 feet. They went out over the ocean. They were not up a half minute when someone on the beach noticed that the engines were not working well.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

UPWARD TREND IN STOCK LIST

NEW YORK, July 8.—Canadian Pacific was an upward leader in the stock market to-day, strength in that international issue being shown both here and in London. Before the London market had closed heavy buying orders from Berlin from traders who were covering for the week had sent that issue up for a substantial advance. It opened here 1½ points higher.

The general tone of the New York market was steady at the opening and advances were noted in many shares. Steel was up ⅛, Amalgamated ⅛, Reading ⅛ and Southern Pacific ⅛. While Southern Railway showed an advance of ⅛, Atchison, American Smelting and Union Pacific opened unchanged. Missouri Pacific showed weakness and in the first few minutes had declined ⅛.

Traders did not look for any important developments in the short session, but expected the market to hold strong on covering for the week end.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit continued to show strength on account of New York [illegible] situation, opening ⅛ higher. The Curb Market opened steady with American [illegible] three points. Americans closed firm in London. At first they had hardened, but later reacted. Canadian Pacific was dealt in heavily there.

Back Pictures Allow Anyone to Enter Great

$10,000 PROVERB CONTEST

At Any Time! Proverb Books Ready!

Many of the questions received from contestants are all of the same sort, and a few general explanations may clear up some points.

Some do not understand what a complete set of solutions is. A set embraces the solutions of all of the puzzle pictures in the contest, numbers one (1) to seventy-five (75) inclusive. Each contestant is permitted to send in, at the close of the contest, one, two, or three complete sets. But there must be only one answer to each puzzle in any one set. That is, that you cannot have two or three answers to a picture unless you send in two or three complete sets. No sets are to be sent in until after the last puzzle picture has appeared in the American. Then each set must be arranged in numerical order and forwarded to the "Contest Department, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass."

The sets will be considered separately, that is, if you send in more than one set, your chance of success rests entirely upon your best set. Correct answers from one set will not be transferred to another in order to make one completely correct set.

It is not necessary to send the pictures with the solutions, but the pictures may be used in arranging the sets of answers if contestants so choose.

The names of the winners, together with the correct solutions of all the puzzles, will be published in the American after the close of the contest.

Anyone, anywhere in New England is eligible to enter the contest at any time. There is no age limit. It is a contest for persons of all ages. The out-of-town resident has exactly as good a chance of winning a prize as the city resident.

Anyone may enter the contest today, or any day during the contest. Those who wish to enter now may obtain the back numbers of all the puzzle pictures that have been published thus far by sending to the "Contest Department" at the regular rates of the American for the days on which the pictures appeared. Sunday back numbers are 5c (plus return postage). Daily back numbers are 1c (plus return postage).

The back numbers include the answer blanks. A person who obtains a full series today, is on an equal footing with those who began when the first picture appeared. You may call for back numbers or send for them by mail.

New contestants will find the PROVERB BOOK a very handy guide to the contest. It contains more than 3,000 proverbs, and these will include all of the puzzles that will be represented during the entire contest.

A copy of the PROVERB BOOK may be obtained from the Contest Department by sending a money order for 25c or calling for same. Upon receipt of 25c a book will be furnished those who desire it.

There are several imitation PROVERB BOOKS and the American has warned contestants to avoid purchasing them.

Hold all answers until you have the entire set. No answers will be considered if sent in before the publication of the last picture

Conditions of the Contest. Read Carefully

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

State Street News For Investors

The bears in the market have the quality of persistency, and no matter what may be said regarding their judgment, it cannot be denied that they never tire of trying to do harm.

Bear raids do not induce people to dispose of stocks actually owned, and unless there be real liquidation it is not at all probable the most vivid crop fright will be influential enough to bring about much of a decline.

There is no doubt that fundamentals are as sound as could be wished. There are no overloaded pools in the market and there is not a commission house in the Street that is not doing business on a safe basis. There is no indication of uneasiness on the part of substantial interests over anything, and no reason exists why optimism should not be the accepted policy.

Good buying has been noted in all the granger stocks, and the purchasing in Union Pacific is regarded as particularly significant. The absorption of Great Northern and Northern Pacific is of the highest character andso and will be increased in case of further setbacks from any cause. There is a tendency on the part of those who sold Atchison for the purpose of taking profits higher up to replace their lines now.

A prevalent opinion was that the market was awaiting publication of the Government crop report on Monday. This report will give the final condition of Winter wheat, the amount of wheat in farmers' hands on July 1, the condition of Spring wheat, corn, oats and hay and the condition and acreage of corn. On corn, it will be the first report of the year, and it is in regard to corn that interest is greatest.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit is being well purchased and the Street believes now it will get most of the subway extensions with practically a guarantee of 6 per cent. on its stock. The company is earning 6 per cent. now and could easily continue at that rate, so that a guarantee by the city would be fair for both sides.

A movement in American Ice has been undertaken by a pool of professional traders. The ice company is earning just now at the rate of more than 5 per cent. on the stock. There is no promise to pay dividends, but the hot weather, combined with these earnings, is directing attention to the stock which occupies an ideal speculative position.

Organization of the world-wide steel trust seems to have made Congress unnecessary, and it is possible now that a vote will be taken on reciprocity within a week or so. Members of Congress are beginning to buy some securities in a cautious manner, and that is an indication of their belief that it is time to go home.

Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke has made another surprising advance. For several years this stock has been picked up in small lots by brokers, who insisted that in time it would be absorbed by the Steel Trust. The present advance is undoubtedly due to the report of the Bureau of Corporations of the United States government on the Steel Trust, showing the trade importance of control of raw material. The Virginia Company has some very valuable ore lands.

The illness of John W. Gates in France is interesting State street, because Gates has had the credit of being the disturbing element in the steel trade recently. The Republic Iron & Steel Company, in which he is dominant, started the price cutting. The Texas Company, which Gates is generally believed to control, but which Wall Street suspects is a branch of the Standard Oil, has declined $6 a share since his illness became known.

"Next year," said Daniel Manning, who knows something about crops, "it might be well for the firms sending out experts to follow the example of the big league and have the eyes of these men examined by competent oculists before the season opens."

R. E. Colton of Chester, Vt., an old-time Alaska prospector, is en route to Blackhorse, Nev., to inspect the Amalgamated-Nevada property.

Beginning to-day the New York clearing house will institute a change in the manner of figuring the reserve of member institutions. Instead of including trust company deposits with members carrying a 25 per cent. reserve as part of the trust company reserve, as heretofore, this item will be eliminated and surplus reserve based entirely upon actual cash holdings of both classes of institutions. This, of course, will result in smaller surplus reserve than has appeared in the last few weeks.

increased its annual dividend rate from 6 to 8 per cent. by the declaration of 2 per cent. quarterly.

Cambridge will receive bids until noon, July 12, for $198,000 4 per cent. bonds of different maturities.

BLOODHOUND UPHELD BY KANSAS COURT

TOPEKA, July 8.—The Kansas Supreme Court upheld the bloodhound as an agent of justice. If the hound had been proven accurate in following the trail of human beings, that evidence was enough, said the court, to convict. The decision came in the appeal of Glen Adams, convicted in November, 1910, in Graham County of the murder of Joseph Anderson, a farmer.

FOIL DYNAMITE PLOT IN HAVANA

HAVANA, July 8.—A conspiracy to dynamite the government palace was frustrated by the police at 1 o'clock this morning. After learning of the plot a squad of officers raided a meeting of Socialists and made several arrests. Some of the suspects were recognized as well known Anarchists.

This was the night's only occurrence of revolutionary import. Havana is quiet, and the rurales have the situation well in hand in the disturbed districts of the provinces of Pinar Del Rio and Oriente.

A Prayer for Working Women

They Need Prayers—Heaven Knows. This Prayer Is a Good One. It Might Be Extended

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Mr. H. T. Eaton sends to this office a printed prayer, entitled, "For Women Who Toil." And Mr. Eaton asks, "Was anything more beautiful ever written?"

Yes, more beautiful things have been written—a good many of them. Some of them you will find in the New Testament.

But this is an earnest, good prayer. We are glad to print it, and give a few suggestions for additions to it.

THE PRAYER FOR WOMEN WHO TOIL

O God, we pray Thee for our sisters who are leaving the ancient shelter of the home to earn their wage in the factory and the store and the press of modern life. Save them from the strain of unremitting toil that would unfit them for the holy duties of home and motherhood which the future may lay upon them. Give them grace to cherish, under the new surroundings, the old sweetness and gentleness of womanhood, and in the rough mingling of life, to keep their hearts pure and their lives untarnished. Save them from the terrors of utter want. Teach them to stand loyally by their sisters, that by united action they may better their common lot. If it must be so that our women toil like men, help us still to reverence in them the mothers of the future. But make us determined to shield them from unequal burdens, that the women of our nation be not drained of strength and hope for the enrichment of a few, lest our homes grow poor in the wifely sweetness and motherly love which have been the saving strength and glory of our country. To such as yearn for the love and sovereign freedom of their own home, grant in due time the fulfillment of their sweet desires. By Mary, the beloved, who bore the world's redemption in her bosom: by the memory of our own dear mothers who kissed our souls awake; by the little daughters who must soon go out into that world which we are now fashioning for others, we beseech Thee that we may deal aright by all women.

To the writer of that prayer, and to others that pray for women condemned to work under vile, modern conditions, we would add these suggestions:

Pray that men may be more nearly like human beings and less like animals. If you can make men better with your prayers, you can make conditions for women better at once.

Pray that men acquire sufficient decency to make the exploitation of women an impossibility.

Pray that women may have the right to vote, and thus be enabled to protect themselves at the polls as men protect themselves—that is to say, when the men have the intelligence to vote rightly.

Pray that the day will come when no woman will be condemned to toil, when the intelligence of men and the perfection of machinery will give to women the freedom, the happiness and the comfort to which they are entitled as the creators of the human race and the inspiration of the race.

The prayer which we quote is sent to us, printed in a small pamphlet issued by the First Baptist Church, of Brockton, Massachusetts.

We hope the prayer is read quite often in that church and that as a result there isn't any man there who devotes his energies to seeing how cheaply he can make women work.

The Bible teaches that the Creator of the universe made one man and one woman, finished all His work in six days, and did no work after that.

If the creation of one man and one woman entitles an Omnipotent Being to a long, perpetual rest, certainly the mother that creates half a dozen men and women is entitled to rest, and ought not to be sent to scrub the floors of an office building in her old age.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

UPHOLDS TRADES UNIONS

Editor AMERICAN:

Dr. Eliot, if he is correctly reported in his Faneuil Hall address on July 4, said "If a man is going to have his will and wishes subordinated to the will of another and be forced to accept the dictation of another in regard to the ways and means of earning his own livelihood and that of his family, it matters little, so far as his condition of freedom is concerned, whether that other be a king, a financier, a trades union or an association of employers." This paragraph in his address seems to me to imply that he does not approve of trades unions, or at least puts them in doubtful company, in so far as they dictate to a member "in regard to the ways and means of earning his own livelihood and that of his family," and Dr. Eliot, in this connection, classes trades unions with kings. One difference between a member of a trades union and a subject of a king is that the former chooses his ruler, if you please to call him such, and the other does not. The former may depose his ruler and the latter may not (at least without revolution).

I know that many things are done by trades unions that I wish were not done. Many things were done by the patriots of '76 of which we don't approve. A point that I wish to make is that there are marked similarities between trades unions of to-day and the patriots of '76. Both have been hungry and cold for the sake of their principles. The trades unionist subordinates his own will to that of another just as the patriots of '76 subordinated their wills to that of George Washington and other rulers. Trades unions have rulers, or rather officers, to-day because they want them, just as the patriots wanted George Washington in office. In this particular, the rest of the world might learn something from the trades unionists. We don't always have men in office, for instance our senators, because we want them. The trades union is fighting for industrial freedom.

In order to get industrial freedom, it has seemed to them, and I think wisely, that for the time being they must subordinate their wills to the wills of their leaders. "but," says Dr. Eliot, perhaps, "some men want to work in a mine or a factory and the trades unions says: 'No, not unless you join us.'" True—the trades unionist pleads guilty. There is no use denying the fact that the situation in some coal mines and other industries is very much like the situation of a group of men battling with the elements in an open boat. A man must not, in such a situation, say he will not act in unison with the others in the boat, he must take his oar or else get out of the boat. I don't think that my argument is unfair, when I liken the situation of the average miner, to the situation of the man on the tempestuous sea. If reports are true, one would almost rather take his chance with the tempestuous sea than with some of the "trustees by divine right," who made necessary the coal strike.

I do try to look at the matter impersonally, for I believe that it should be so approached. Such men as Mr. Baer, in my eyes, stand for a class. I try not to be angry with them. Perhaps we would be as biased on our own side as he is if we were in his place, but let us not shut our eyes to the fact that the Mr. Baers exist and must be dealt with. No way has yet been found so good, if you take fair average of all results, as trades unionism. I think that even a trades unionist may look forward to the day, perhaps after we are dead and gone, when trades unionism may safely modify its rules, when life shall not be such a personal struggle.

Boston. RALPH B. McDANIEL.

MATTAPAN STREET CARS

Editor AMERICAN:

On July 1, when the Boston L placed the new pay-as-you-enter convertible cars on the Dudley street-Mattapan run, they took off the through cars from the North Station to Mattapan via Columbia road, except during the hours preceding 8:30 a. m. and between 5 and 6 p. m.; thus obliging patrons destined to Mattapan to transfer at Franklin Field, causing them much inconvenience and discomfort.

In a personal interview to-day with Superintendent of Transportation of the Boston Elevated George R. Tripp, he said in part: "The company considers the new cars (being larger and quicker than those formerly on the Dudley street-Mattapan run, and more of them being run per hour) would better take care of the Mattapan people than they had been formerly cared for, but in order to keep the increased number of these cars running they had to take off the Columbia road cars from the tracks between Franklin Field and Mattapan square, so as not to delay the convertible cars; but if they found there were a considerable number of patrons who wished the old Columbia road through schedule replaced, it would be done, although it would necessitate running fewer convertible cars to Dudley street."

Now, all you travelers via Columbia road who wish to enjoy a comfortable and enjoyable ride from the city to Mattapan square without the exceedingly obnoxious transfer at Franklin Field, wake up and protest by sending letters expressing your disapproval of existing conditions to the head of the Department of Transportation of the Boston Elevated Railroad, at 101 Milk street.

Do not be forced against your inclination to travel via Dudley street and ride in the convertible cars. These cars are not open and cool as the regular open car is. They are hot in summer and must surely be cold in winter. If you are a smoker keep off the convertible, where only eight seats are provided for smokers against fifteen on the regular open car.

In the eerie land of Never
  Lies a sullen, silent river,
Here the only sound forever
  Is a sighing, "Never, never,"
Of the rushes, where they shiver
    On the shore.

Lost, bewildered in this dreary
  Land of doubt, my Soul a-weary,
I with Death did venture query,
  And of Life propounded theory;
Death's grim council e'en was cheery
    On this murk, mysterious moor.

For his wisdom was supernal,
  Though his visage seemed infernal;
And his words of truth, eternal,
  Lit my soul with Hope diurnal;
And from out my heart nocturnal
    Sorrows bore.

"Mortal, fear'st thou death to sever
  Life's thin silver cord forever,
That thy soul shall slumber ever
  On the borderland of Never?
Here where Life and Death dissever,
  Is thy fear of Self, not more?

"In Life's way there is a turning,
  When thy heart of woe is burning;
Then,—wouldst thou, of Death, have learning,
  While in life, of wisdom spurning?
Would'st thou have, without the earning,
    Love Eternal?"

In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscle trained: know'st thou when Fate
Thy measure takes, or when she'll say to thee,
"I find thee worthy; do this deed for me?"

He Writes About Garages and Gardens

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Pa & Ma took me out to the country last Monday for to visit with a frend of his naimed Martin Sparrow, wich lives neer Squantum, ware he has a hoam, part down & the rest up. Pa toald Ma & me last week that Mr. Sparrow wanted to have us cum out & see them in thare new hoam, & Ma & me was glad to go.

We got out to the Sparrows about noon. Mister Sparrow was painting thare new barn, & wile Ma was talking to his wife Pa took me down to watch Mister Sparrow painting.

Beefoar I talk you all oaver the plais, sed Pa's frend, I want you to pay partiklar attenshun to this new bilding wich I am jest painting. It is part barn and part garage, he sed. The part on the left is going to be the garage, it is all finished now excep the ottomobeel. We are going to git one (1) that will fit fine, as soon as I pull off a deal in State St. In the meantime, he sed, thare is no harm in beeing prepared. On this side of the barn, he sed to Pa, is the stabel part, for the horses. You see, thare is two mangers, one (1) for each horse, & two fine stalls, wich I think I shall paint to match the color of my steeds, he sed.

What color are yure steeds? sed Pa. I haven't bought them yet, sed Mister Sparrow, but the first time one of my brokers stops looking at the licker & looks at the ticker, I may buy two fine spanking road horses. I was thinking a roan & a bay wud be about rite for a prancing team, he sed to Pa, but the only trubbel with gittin a roan is that I am afraid I can't find any roan paint to paint the stall to match.

That is so, sed Pa, I haven't evver thought of a tragedy like that. & eeven if you had a roan horse & a stall painted roan color, sed Pa, he mite get into the bay stall by mistaik, & that wud mar yure color skeem.

Jest then the ladies caim out of the house & stood with Pa & me wile we watched Mister Sparrow painting his new barn & garage.

I wish you wud stop painting, deerest, sed Missus Sparrow, & talk us around so our frends can see the rest of the premises. I am so anxshus for them to see our new garden. I planted sum of the seeds myself, she toald Ma. Three radish seeds & two lettuce bulbs, she sed. Bulbs doant grow on lettuces, sed Ma, & thay are planted by putting seeds in the ground. Oh, sed Missus Sparrow, of course I was not brought up in the country, so I dident know. For goodness saik, she sed to her husband, will you evver stop painting?

Sooner than you will, sed Mister Sparrow. This barn will be all painted beefoar you know it, & sure enuff, jest then he finished the barn.

This is our garden, he sed to us wen we got to it. It was around at the other side of the house & it was about as big as the house, no bigger. It was all little rows of brown dirt, with green weeds in between. Thare is lots of gardens like it, but the Sparrow peepul seemed to think that it was in a class by itself. We seemed to think so too. Peepul has to think a grate deel in these days, Pa says.

Jest beefoar dinner Pa and Mister Sparrow went out the back way & wen thay caim back thay was wiping thare mustaches What have you gentlemen been doing? sed Missus Sparrow.

Oh, sed her husband, we was jest putting away sum paint in the barn.
